(a) These States admitted subsequent to the apportionment.

(b) Representation fixed by Act of admission June 1, 1796.

(c) Partitioned from Virginia by Congress in 1863.

The basis for the apportionment of congressional representation depends upon the population of the several States. Congress determines by Act the number of members of the House. The Act of Congress, approved January 16, 1901, provides that the House of Representatives shall be composed of 386 members, but Oklahoma having been admitted subsequent to this Act, the Constitution of the United States gives it 2 Senators and the Enabling Act of Congress, approved June 16, 1906, gives it 5 Representatives.

ESTIMATES OF POPULATION OF CALIFORNIA.

By DR. N. K. FOSTER, Secretary State Board of Health.

The population of California in 1907 has been estimated conservatively by the Census Bureau method by adding to the population in 1900 seven tenths of the increase between 1890 and 1900, except that for the few counties showing decreases between the last two Federal censuses, the population in 1900 has been taken for 1907. For the three principal cities arbitrary estimates have been made because of their exceptionally rapid growth, the estimate for San Francisco in 1907 being 450,000, for Los Angeles 250,000, and for Oakland 200,000. The variations from the standard method made by the Census Bureau in published estimates for Berkeley, Pasadena, and San Diego have also been followed on account of annexations, while for other cities the same method has been applied as explained above for counties.

The estimates for the fifty-seven counties and the twenty-four cities having freeholders' charters are as follows:

(h) Gold and silver can not be stated separately prior to 1876. From 1862 to 1875, inclusive, gold and silver were not in circulation except on the Pacific coast, where it is estimated that the average specie circulation was about $25,000,000, and this estimate is continued for the three following years under the head of gold. After that period gold was available for circulation.

(i) Total specie in circulation. Gold and silver not separately stated prior to 1876.

(j) As the result of a special investigation by the Director of the Mint, a reduction of $135,000,000 was made in the estimate of gold coin in circulation on July 1, 1907, as compared with the basis of previous year.

AREA OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

The following description of California is from a report to the Department of the Interior by Prof. E. W. Hilgard of the University of California: "The State of California lies between the parallels of 32° 30' and 42° north latitude, thus stretching through nine and a half degrees of latitude corresponding to the difference on the Atlantic coast between Edisto Inlet, South Carolina, and Cape Cod, Massachusetts. Its northern third lies between 120° and 124° 26' west longitude, the most westerly point being Cape Mendocino, whence the coast trends southeastward, with a westerly convexity, toward San Diego Bay. Between the extreme northwest and southeast corners the direct distance is 775 miles. The maximum width (between Point Concepcion and the north end of the Amargosa range in Nevada) is 235 miles, and the minimum width (between the Golden Gate and the southern end of Lake Tahoe) 148 miles. The total area of the State is 158,360 square miles. Its land area alone is 155,980 square miles, being second only to Texas among the States and Territories as now defined." It has 1,200 miles of coast line on the Pacific Ocean.

The following statement, furnished by the United States Surveyor-General for California, shows the estimated area of the State of California:

FRANCISCAN MISSIONS AND OTHER CALIFORNIA LANDMARKS.

By HON. JOSEPH R. KNOWLAND,

President California Historic Landmarks League, and Representative in Congress, Third California District.

Nearly every period of California's early history is recalled by landmarks scattered throughout the State, these silent but eloquent reminders of the days of long ago bringing home to Californians the universally acknowledged fact that no other State in the Union can boast of a history more interesting, more picturesque, or more romantic.

The remains of the old Franciscan missions recall a most important historic period, arousing interest in the fascinating story of the establishment of the twenty-one missions, stretching from San Diego in the south to Sonoma in the north. The Franciscan missionaries were the original pioneers of California, sowing the first seeds of civilization and establishing the first permanent settlements. It was in the year 1769, at San Diego, that the first mission was established. Monterey was the next spot selected. Thus the work progressed until a chain of missions had been established, located in such proximity that a traveler could start on foot from San Diego and nightly enjoy the hospitality of a different mission until Sonoma was reached. San Francisco Solano (Sonoma) mission was the last to be founded, 1823 being the date of its establishment.

Of the original twenty-one mission establishments, but two have entirely disappeared—San Rafael Arcangel and Santa Cruz. Of the remaining nineteen, all but five are in a fair state of preservation, and portions of at least four of these five can be saved. Crumbling walls mark the spot where Soledad mission once stood, and in a few more years all trace of this mission, located near the town of Soledad, in Monterey County, will be obliterated. San Diego, the mother mission, is in a poor state of preservation, little remaining but the front wall of the chapel, which has been safeguarded by the Landmarks Club of Southern California. La Purisima Concepcion, five miles from the town of Lompoc, in Santa Barbara County, was fast reaching a state of disintegration when restoration would be impossible, but fortunately the property was turned over to the Landmarks Club of Southern California, which organization, under the leadership of Mr. Charles F. Lummis, is exerting every effort to raise funds for its preservation. San Francisco Solano (Sonoma) mission was purchased in 1903 with a portion of the Landmarks Fund raised by the San Francisco Examiner, with the assistance of the California Historic Landmarks League and other patriotic bodies. In 1905 the California Legislature passed an act providing for the acquisition, preservation and protection of the Sonoma mission property, which was turned over to the State without cost.

One of the most beautiful and less frequently visited missions is located in Monterey County, twenty-six miles from King City. This is mission San Antonio de Padua, a most picturesque ruin. It was formerly one of the most extensive of the mission establishments. For years it was neglected, with no one to stay the hand of the vandal. The mission stands alone, its crumbling walls and deserted buildings appearing as if untouched since the departure of the padres and neophytes years ago. In 1903 the California Historic Landmarks League began the work of restoration, but the funds at hand proved insufficient to complete the reroofing of the chapel, and for two winters the great adobe walls, six feet in thickness, were exposed to the elements, much damage resulting. After great effort a few hundred dollars were raised in 1905 and work resumed, but with this small sum it was only possible to erect a permanent roof over the vestibule. Unfortunately, however, the earthquake of 1906 wrought great damage, completely demolishing the newly erected walls and seriously injuring other portions of the mission. Conditions were most discouraging and the officers of the League debated as to the advisability of further attempting to save this old landmark, but the determining factor was the knowledge that San Antonio was one of the last of the remaining missions in a condition to be restored, and that another winter's rains would leave it a hopeless ruin. With funds received from the Grand Parlor of Native Sons, in June, 1906, the rebuilding of the walls commenced, and the rains of the winter of 1906-7 found all but a section of the chapel walls protected by a permanent roof, which unfinished portion will be completed before the winter of 1907-8.

At San Luis Rey, in San Diego County, the church is in good state of preservation, but the picturesque arches, of which there were originally thirty-two, ornamented with latticed railings, are year by year crumbling. At San Juan Capistrano, in Orange County, the great chapel, in the form of a cross, was years ago destroyed by an earthquake, but a number of other buildings, safeguarded by the Southern California Landmarks Club, remain. San Gabriel mission, ten miles from the city of Los Angeles, is in use, services being regularly held within the walls of this old structure. Twenty miles north of Los Angeles stand the remaining buildings belonging to San Fernando Rey. The chapel was reroofed by the Southern California Club; the building with the arched corridor is in fair state of preservation. Santa Barbara and San Buenaventura missions are in an excellent condition of preservation. This is likewise the case with Santa Ynez mission, in Santa Barbara County. The two missions of San Luis Obispo and San Juan Bautista, located respectively in the counties of San Luis Obispo and San Benito, have been to a degree disfigured by the erection of modern church steeples. Both missions are very interesting to visit. The recent earthquake did considerable damage to San Juan Bautista.

While the exterior of Santa Clara mission is quite modern, painstaking effort has been put forth to have the interior of the modern chapel conform to the old. This is particularly true of the decorated ceiling above the sanctuary, each board in the old ceiling having been carefully taken down, numbered, and later made use of in the new church. A portion of the sanctuary rail was made from the beams of the old chapel. The old adobe walls still constitute a part of the building adjoining the chapel and opening into the patio. Many interesting and valuable mission relics are carefully preserved in a room set aside for this purpose. The mission a few miles from the old town of Monterey, San Carlos Borromeo, sometimes confused with the old church located within the city proper, has been restored with a vengeance, a peaked shingle roof destroying, to a great extent, the original beauty of this structure. Little remains of Mission San José, in Alameda County. The old mission of San Miguel, in the town of like name, in San Luis Obispo County, is most interesting, its interior still showing the decorations made by the Indians. San Francisco de Asis (Dolores) mission, in San Francisco, withstood the earthquake and conflagration of 1906, the modern church adjoining suffering great damage.

These old missions should be preserved. Over one hundred years have come and gone since the passing of the mission system, and each year Californians are becoming more impressed with the importance of preserving these reminders of the days of Spanish rule and monuments to those self-sacrificing padres who labored unceasingly for the betterment of the Indians, facing the greatest difficulties, enduring hardships, and in many instances sacrificing their lives.

The hardships and trials of the early pioneers of California are recalled by General John A. Sutter's famous fort at Sacramento, restored through the efforts of the Native Sons of the Golden West, with the assistance of the people of the State. As far back as 1888, the importance of preserving and restoring this old fort, founded in 1839, was realized by the Native Sons and a movement set on foot with this object in view. A sum of over $20,000 was raised by the order, and a like amount appropriated by the Legislature of 1891. An additional sum of $15,000 was made available at the session of 1893 to complete the restoration. When the work commenced, the only building standing was a single structure. On April 26,

RESTORED SUTTER'S FORT, SACRAMENTO.

1893, Sutter Fort was dedicated with fitting ceremonies, although the work was not completed. The fort, restored to its original state, is a parallelogram about 300 feet in length by 150 feet in width, the inclosing adobe walls being 18 feet in height. The old shops, storerooms, and barracks have been reproduced. The grounds have been improved within recent years, and the Legislature of 1907 provided for the purchase of an additional strip of land surrounding the fort.

The Monterey Custom House, over which the flags of Spain, Mexico, and the United States have floated, is one of the most interesting of this State's landmarks, and is said to be the oldest public building in California. Historically, the most important event associated with the Custom House was the raising of the American flag over this structure on July 7, 1846, by Commodore John Drake Sloat, which act signalized the passing forever of Mexican rule on these far western shores. The building and grounds are the property of the United States Government. A lease was obtained from the United States by the Order of Native Sons in 1900, and following the action of the Legislature of 1901 in appropriating $4,200 for the restoration of the property, this lease was transferred to the State Commission.

Colton Hall, where California's first constitutional convention convened, in September, 1849, is to be preserved by the State, the sum of $1,500 having been appropriated by the Legislature of 1905. The Act provides for the appointment of a board of three Colton Hall Trustees, who shall accept a lease from the city of Monterey for the property in question.

One of the less frequently visited landmarks of California, and withal one of the most interesting, is Fort Ross, in Sonoma County, twelve miles from railroad connection. This Russian settlement was founded in 1812. Fort Ross was a quadrangle about 300 feet square, and inclosed by heavy redwood timbers eight inches thick and fifteen feet in height, set upright in the ground. At the diagonally opposite corners of the inclosure were block-houses of hewn logs. Within this fortification was the Governor's residence, a chapel, officers' quarters and store-houses. There were other buildings outside of the stockade. To-day the old Governor's house, the barracks and granary still stand, while portions of the old block-houses remain. The Greek chapel, the most interesting of the buildings, was leveled by the earthquake of 1906, but as this property is now owned by the State it is probable that the chapel will be restored. The Russians did not recognize Spanish sovereignty north of San Francisco, and had they pressed their claims, refusing to vacate, and backed by the power of their government, the history of California might have been different from what it is to-day. The Russians voluntarily withdrew in 1842, after occupying the settlement for thirty years.

It is the earnest wish of every true Californian that sentiments in favor of the preservation and restoration of the historic places throughout the State may year by year grow, and that the appeals of those interested in the great work may meet with a generous response.

STATE POLITICAL HISTORY.

The Primary Title to California.—Spain held the first title to California, and our right to the country, following the chain through Mexico back to Spain, was derived from the Treaty of the Partition of the Ocean of 1494. The islands found by Columbus in his voyage in 1492 were supposed to lie in the immediate vicinity of Asia, and their discovery was the result of an endeavor to reach the shores of India by a western course. With that same object the Portuguese had explored the Atlantic coast of Africa for a passage to the Indian Ocean, and were encouraged by a bull of Pope Nicholas V., issued in 1454, that assured to them the exclusive right of navigation, trade, and conquest of all lands they might find in that course. They had not reached the southern extremity of Africa when Columbus returned from his first voyage, but had discovered the Azores and Cape Verd Islands, and on the strength thereof claimed that the countries found by Columbus belonged to the crown of Portugal. Spain referred the matter to Pope Alexander VI., and on May 3, 1493, he determined the controversy by drawing an imaginary line of longitude one hundred leagues west of the Azores, and granting to Spain all countries which it had discovered or might discover lying to the west, and to Portugal all those lying to the east of that line. Upon this decision was afterward founded the Treaty of Partition of the Ocean, concluded at Tordesillas, in Spain, June 7, 1494. between the governments of Spain and Portugal. By this treaty the Portuguese were to enjoy and possess the exclusive right to all the seas and territories east of a meridian line passing three hundred and seventy leagues west of the Cape Verd Islands, and the Spaniards were to possess the same right to all the seas and lands west of that line. The two nations thus settled the conditions on which they were to appropriate nearly all the sea and land on the globe, without regard for the claims of other nations. The Spaniards planted colonies in the islands newly found beyond the Atlantic, to which they gave the collective name of West Indies, and soon ascertained that they were at the borders of a vast continent. How far south it extended and whether it was united in the north with Asia remained to be determined, and with those objects they persevered in their examinations, in which they were encouraged by the assurances of the natives respecting the existence of a great sea, and rich and powerful nations toward the setting sun.

Ignorance of Early Geographers respecting California.—After the Spanish conquest of Mexico by Cortes in 1520-21 expeditions by sea were sent to explore the western coast of North America, but it was not until two hundred and fifty years afterward that anything approaching a correct idea of the geography of the coast of California became known. In the Gazetteer by Laurence Echard, published in London in 1741, this reference to California appears: "California, a vast island of America, in the S. Sea, which reaches to New Spain, or Granada, and is separated from them by a Branch of the Sea, in Length about 6 or 700 Lgs. from N. to S. from the Prom. called the White Cape, the Cape of St. Sebastian, Cabo Mendocino, to the Prom. called Cabo de St. Lucar. It is now subject to the King of Spain."

In another book, "The Young Man's Book of Knowledge," printed in London in 1794, New Mexico, including California, is described as lying "between 23 and 43 Degrees of N. Latitude, and extends from 94 to 126 Degrees of W. Longitude: it is bounded by unknown Lands on the N. by Old Mexico and the Pacific Ocean S. by Louisiana E. and the Pacific Ocean W., being about 2,000 miles long and 1,600 broad. This country has a most delightful Climate, and a Soil productive of every Thing for Profit or Delight. It has rich Mines of Silver, and some of Gold. which are worked more and more every Day : and it produces precious Stones of several Kinds. The Dew that falls in California, and lights on the Rose Leaves, candies and becomes hard like Manna, having the Sweetness of refined Sugar. And in the Middle of the Country are Plains of Salt, firm and clear as Crystal, which, considering the vast Quantities of Fish found on its Coast, might render it an invaluable Acquisition to any industrious Nation. California is a Peninsula finely situated for Trade, and has a Pearl Fishery of great value. It was first discovered by the great Conqueror of Mexico, Fernando Cortes. Our famous Admiral and Navigator, Sir Francis Drake, took Possession of it in 1579; and the principal King formally invested him with the Sovereignty. But the Government of Great Britain has not hitherto attempted to vindicate this Title."

John W. Dwinelle, in an address on the acquisition of California by the United States, delivered before the Pioneer Society in San Francisco, September 10, 1866, gave these facts: "It was only by accident, after all, that Columbus discovered the vast region of continents and islands which are now called America. He was not in quest of new continents, nor of the golden-fruited gardens of the Hesperides. Believing, from inductive reasoning, that the earth was round, but with very imperfect notions of its magnitude, he was firmly persuaded that by sailing in a westerly direction from the coast of Spain, he would in due time arrive on the coast of China, which was then classed as a portion of the Indies; and when he discovered the first American islands, believing that he had already reached the Indies, he gave to the natives the name of Indians, which inaccurate classification they have ever since retained. Looking over the books and maps of the old geographers, it is curious and wonderful to observe how much they did know, and how much they did not know, of the geography of the northwestern coast of America for more than two hundred years after the discoveries made by Columbus. Although Cortes, when he fell into that inevitable disgrace with which the kings of Spain have always rewarded their greatest benefactors, sent out various expeditions from Mexico for the exploration of the northwestern coast, and even accompanied some of them as far as La Paz, in Lower California, and although the viceroys who succeeded him sent out various expeditions within fifty years after the conquest of Mexico, both by sea and by land, which must have penetrated as far north as the 42d degree of latitude, yet the physical geography of that region remained in the most mythical condition, and the very existence of the bay of San Francisco was contested as fabulous by the Spanish viceroys of New Spain less than a hundred years ago. There is in the possession of the Odd Fellows' library of this city an engraved map of the world, published at Venice in the year 1546, which is remarkable for its general accuracy and for the beauty of its execution. but on this map, at the latitude of San Francisco, the American continent is represented as sweeping around in a large circle, and forming a junction with that of Asia, while the Colorado, the largest river in the world, rising in the mountains of Thibet, and meandering through a course of 15,000 or 20,000 miles, pours its vast volume of waters into the Gulf of California. In the year 1588, a Spanish captain of marine, named Lorenzo Ferrer Maldonado, published an account of a voyage which he pretended to have made from the Atlantic Ocean, through the Northern sea, to the Pacific, and thence to China, giving all its geographical details and personal incidents. This apocryphal voyage proved a delusion and a stumbling-block to historians and voyagers for more than two hundred years, and it was not until the year 1791 that two Spanish frigates, sent out for that purpose by authority of the King of Spain, by a thorough exploration of the extreme northwestern coast, established the fact that a passage through the North Sea did not exist, and that the pretensions of Maldonado were utterly false. It is only within a comparatively recent period that the fact has been generally received in modern geography that California was connected with the main continent, and was not an island. In Ogilvie's 'America, being the latest and most accurate account of the New World,' a most elegant and luxurious folio, published in London in 1671, California is laid down as an island, extending from Cape St. Lucas, in the tropic of Cancer, to the 45th degree of latitude, and including the famous New Albion of Sir Francis Drake. The same map is reproduced by Captain Shelvocke, of the royal navy, in his account of his 'Voyage Around the World by way of the South Sea,' in his Majesty's ship of war, published in London in 1726; and in a geographical work published in London in the same year, by Daniel Coxe, Esq., an account is given of 'a new and curious discovery and relation betwixt the river Meschachebe (Mississippi) and the South Sea, which separates America from China by means of several large rivers and lakes, with a description of the coast of the said sea to the Straits of Uries, as also of a rich and considerable trade to be carried on from thence to China, Japan and Tartary.' I can not ascertain that California was relieved of its insular character among geographers until the publication of a map by Father Begert, a missionary of the Society of Jesus, in an account of Lower California which he printed at Mannheim in 1771, on his return to Germany after his order had been expelled, in 1769, by order of the King of Spain, from the missions which they had successfully established among the Indians of Lower California. Even after it was admitted that California was not an island, but a part of the main land, the most indefinite notions prevailed as to the extent to which the Gulf of California penetrated toward the north; and to the very last of the Spanish and Mexican dominion, when any specific description was given to California in official documents, it was spoken of as a peninsula."

Origin of the Name California.—It is only in recent years that the origin of the name California has been satisfactorily ascertained. In the winter of 1862 Edward E. Hale encountered for the first time the Spanish romance of the "Sergas Esplandian," that is sometimes cited as the fifth book of Amadis of Gaul, but is by Garcia Ordenez de Montalvo, the translator of Amadis. "Coming to the allusion, in this forgotten romance," writes Mr. Hale, "to the island of California, very near to the Terrestrial Paradise, I saw at once that here was the origin of the name of the State of California, long sought for by the antiquarians of that State, but long forgotten. For the romance seems to have been published in 1510—the edition of 1521 is now in existence—while our California, even the peninsula of that name, was not discovered by the Spaniards till 1526, and was not named California till 1535." Mr. Hale called the attention of the American Antiquarian Society to this derivation of the name; in March, 1864, translated for the Atlantic Monthly all the parts of the romance which relate to the Queen of California—Califa—and in 1873 published a small volume on the subject, in which he said:

"The name of California was given by Cortes, who discovered the peninsula in 1535. For the statement that he named it, we have the authority of Herrera. It is proved, I think, that the expedition of Mendoza, in 1532, did not see California; it is certain that they gave it no name. Humboldt saw, in the archives of Mexico, a statement in manuscript that it was discovered in 1526; but for this there is no other authority. It is certain that the name does not appear till 1535. No etymology of this name has been presented satisfactory to the historians. Venegas, the Jesuit historian of California, writing in 1758, sums up the matter in these words: 'The most ancient name is California, used by Bernal Diaz, limited to a single bay. I could wish to gratify the reader by the etymology and true origin of this name; but in none of the various dialects of the natives could the missionaries find the least traces of such a name being given by them to the country, or even to any harbor, bay, or small part of it. Nor can I subscribe to the etymology of some writers, who suppose the name to be given to it by the Spaniards, on their feeling an unusual heat at their first landing here; that they thence called the country California, compounding the two Latin words calida and fornax, a hot furnace. I believe few will think the adventurers could boast of so much literature.' Clavigero, in his history of California, after giving this etymology, offers as an alternative the following, as the opinion 'of the learned Jesuit, D. Giuseppe Compoi': He believes that the name is composed of the Spanish word cala, which means 'a little cove of the sea,' and the Latin fornix, which means 'the vault of a building.' He thinks these words are thus applied, because within Cape St. Lucas there is a little cove of the sea, towards the western part of which rises a rock, so worn out that on the upper part of the hollow is seen a vault, as perfect as if made by art. Cortes, therefore, observing this cala, or cove, and this vault, probably called this port California, or cala and fornix—speaking half in Spanish, half in Latin. Clavigero suggests, as an improvement on this somewhat wild etymology, that Cortes may have said Cala fornax, ‘cove furnace,’ speaking as in the Jesuit’s suggestion, in two languages.” * * *

“Towards the close of this romance of the Sergas of Esplandian, the various Christian knights assemble to defend the Emperor of the Greeks and the city of Constantinople against the attacks of the Turks and Infidels. In the romance, the name appears with precisely our spelling, in the following passage:

“Sergas, ch. 157: ‘Know that, on the right hand of the Indies, there is an island called California, very near to the Terrestrial Paradise, which was peopled with black women, without any men among them, because they were accustomed to live after the fashion of Amazons. They were of strong and hardened bodies, of ardent courage, and of great force. The island was the strongest in the world, from its steep rocks and great cliffs. Their arms were all of gold; and so were the caparisons of the wild beasts which they rode, after having tamed them; for in all the island there is no other metal. They lived in caves very well worked out; they had many ships, in which they sailed to other parts to carry on their forays.’”

The name appears in several distinct passages in the book. Mr. Hale adds: “This romance, as I have said, is believed to have been printed first in 1510. No copies of this edition, however, are extant. But of the edition of 1519 a copy is preserved; and there are copies of successive editions of 1521, 1525, and 1526, in which last year two editions were published—one at Seville and the other at Burgos. All of these are Spanish. It follows, almost certainly, that Cortes and his followers, in 1535, must have been acquainted with the romance; and as they sailed up the west side of Mexico, they supposed they were precisely at the place indicated,—‘on the right hand of the Indies.’ It will be remembered also, that by sailing in the same direction, Columbus, in his letter to the sovereigns, says, ‘he shall be sailing towards the Terrestrial Paradise.’ We need not suppose that Cortes believed the romance more than we do; though we assert that he borrowed a name from it to indicate the peninsula he found ‘on the right side of the Indies, near to the Terrestrial Paradise.’

* * * In ascribing to the Esplandian the origin of the name California, I know that I furnish no etymology for that word. I have not found the word in any earlier romances. I will only suggest that the root Calif, the Spanish spelling for the sovereign of the Mussulman power of the time, was in the mind of the author as he invented these Amazon allies of the Infidel power.”

Early Expeditions of Exploration and Discovery.—About the year 1537 Cortes fitted out several small vessels and sailed north to the head of the Gulf of California. His vessels were provided with everything requisite for planting a colony in the newly discovered region; but he encountered sands, rocks, and sterile mountains, and returned before he had crossed the line that marks the southern boundary of our present State. Soon afterward, the Viceroy Mendoza dispatched another expedition, by land and sea, in the same direction, but accomplished still less. In 1542 the same viceroy sent out Cabrillo, a Portuguese, with two ships, to survey the western coast of California. This expedition penetrated north and reached the 41st degree of latitude on March 10, 1543, and was compelled to return by want of provisions and the bad condition of the ships. On June 17, 1579, Sir Francis Drake landed on this coast, supposedly at a bay a few miles north of San Francisco, that still bears his name. His historian wrote of how the natives mistook them for gods, worshiped them, and offered sacrifices to them, much against their will, and of how Drake took possession of the country in the name of Queen Elizabeth. In his narrative he said: “Our necessaire business being ended, our General with his companie travailed up into the countrey to their villaiges, where we found heardes of deere by 1,000 in a companie, being most large and fat of bodie. We found the whole countrey to be a warren of a strange kinde of connies, their bodies in bigness as be the Barbarie connies, their heads as the heads of ours, the feet of a Want (mole), and the taile of a rat, being of great length: under her chinne on either side a bagge, into which she gathered her meate, which she hath filled her bellie abroad. The people do eat their bodies and make great accompt of their skinnes, for their King's coat was made out of them. Our General called this cuntry Nova Albion, and that for two causes: the one in respect of the white bankes and cliffes which lie toward the sea; and the other because it might have some affinitie with our cuntry in name, which sometime was so called. There is no part of earth here to be taken up, wherein there is not a reasonable quantitie of gold or silver." Before he sailed away, "Our General set up a monument of our being there, as also of her Majestie's right and title to the same, viz.: a plate nailed upon a faire great poste, whereupon was engraven her Majestie's name, the day and yeare of our arrival there, with the free giving up of the province and people into her Majestie's hands, together with her highness' picture and arms, in a piece of fivepence of current English money under the plate, whereunder was also written the name of our General." It would appear that Drake knew nothing of Cabrillo's voyage, for the narrative says: "It seemeth that the Spaniards hitherto had never been in this part of the cuntry, neither did discover the lande by many degrees to the southward of this place."

The Spaniards sent out other expeditions, but they proved fruitless until Count de Monterey, the Viceroy of New Spain, by order of the King, dispatched Sebastian Viscaino, who sailed from Acapulco May 5, 1602, with two large vessels and a tender. This navigator had led an unsuccessful expedition in 1596. November 10, 1602, he entered the bay of San Diego, and December 16th anchored in the bay of Monterey and named it after the Viceroy. The next day a church, tent or arbor, was erected under a large oak tree close to the seaside, and the priests said mass. This, however, was not the first Christian worship on these shores, for Drake had worshiped where he landed twenty-five years before. After leaving Monterey, in January, 1603, the vessels were separated in a storm, and the one that carried Viscaino took refuge in the bay of San Francisco, which seems to have been known before, and search was made for a vessel which was supposed to have been lost there in 1595 on her voyage from the Philippines to Acapulco. Finding no traces of that ship, Viscaino put to sea, and January 20th reached a high white bluff in latitude of 42 degrees that he named Cape San Sebastian. By this time few of his men were fit for service, the weather was stormy, the cold severe, the provisions nearly exhausted, and as the small vessel from which he had been separated did not appear, he returned to Mexico.

First Settlement of California—The Founding of the Missions.—For more than one hundred and sixty years after the expedition of Viscaino, no attempt was made by the Spaniards to colonize the Californias, and beyond a few explorations by land and sea that contributed no important results, no effort was made to extend their discoveries. Attempts were made to establish colonies on the eastern side of the peninsula of California, but they failed for want of funds, from the extreme barrenness of the soil, and from the determined hostility of the natives. In the last of these attempts, under the direction of Atondo, and made in 1683, a number of soldiers, settlers, and Jesuit priests were taken out from Mexico and distributed at various points; but these stations were abandoned before the end of a year, and the authorities of Mexico determined that the reduction of Lower California by such means was impracticable. The Jesuits insisted that the political objects desired might be obtained by the conversion to Christianity and the civilization of the natives, and offered to undertake the task. Their proposition was not encouraged by the Mexican authorities, but they raised contributions in Mexico and in Europe, and in 1697 procured royal warrants of authority to enter upon the reduction of California for the King, but the work was to be prosecuted at their own expense. On receiving these warrants Father Salvatierra sailed with a few laborers and soldiers to the land that was to be the scene of their operations. He was joined by Father Kuhn (a German, called by the Spaniards Kino), and by others of the order. In November, 1697, the first establishment at Loreto was founded. The Jesuits continued their work for three quarters of a century, and until their expulsion. On April 2, 1767, a decree was issued by Charles III. of Spain for the immediate banishment of the Jesuits from the Spanish territories. In Mexico the members of that order were, in July following, sent off to Europe. As to Lower California, the Viceroy placed its execution in the hands of Captain Gaspar de Portala, and appointed him at the same time governor of the peninsula. Portala took over fifty armed men and fourteen Franciscan monks to succeed the Jesuits. He found there was no occasion for the employment of force, for the sixteen Jesuit Fathers submitted to the order and left California February 3, 1768. Father Junipero Serra was then appointed president of the missions in California. He arrived at Loreto on the first of April following, and the next year became the first great pioneer of what is now the State of California. Josef de Galvez, who represented the person of the Spanish monarch in the province, had been invested with powers to visit the missions of Lower California, and had a royal order to send an expedition by sea to rediscover and people the bays of San Diego and Monterey. He reached the peninsula June 6, 1768. Galvez determined to send a land expedition to the north as well as the one by sea. This idea was concurred in by Father Junipero, and they decided that three vessels should sail to meet the expedition by land at San Diego. They agreed that three missions should be established—one at San Diego, another at Monterey, and a third at San Buenaventura. On January 9, 1769, the vessel San Carlos left La Paz, and the San Antonio sailed from San Lucas on the 11th. A smaller ship, the Señor San José, left Loreto June 16th. On these vessels were loaded the ornaments, sacred vases, and other utensils of the church and vestry, together with all kinds of household and field implements and seeds, as well those of old as of new Spain, and two hundred head of cattle. Galvez divided the expedition by land into two parts so as to save one if the other was destroyed by the natives. Portala was appointed commander-in-chief of the land expedition, and Captain Fernando Rivera y Moncada, his second in command, was to take charge of the first division. Moncada's division arrived at San Diego May 14, 1769, after fifty-two days' travel from Loreto. The second division, under the charge of Portala, with whom was Father Junipero, arrived on the first of July, after forty-six days' travel. They found in port the San Antonio, which had arrived on the 11th of April, and the San Carlos, which reached San Diego twenty days later. The Señor San José not having been heard from it was presumed that it was wrecked. On the arrival of the second section with Father Junipero a salute was fired to commemorate the union of all the parties, and the beginning of the work of settlement, conversion, and civilization on the soil of Upper California. July 1, 1769, marks the era of this State. On the 16th, Father Junipero founded the Mission of San Diego at the port of that name. Spanish Rule in California, 1769-1822.—In an address delivered before the Society of California Pioneers of San Francisco by Edmund Randolph, September 10, 1860, was presented a review of the government of California when under the dominion of Spain as revealed by the Spanish archives in the office of the United States Surveyor-General at San Francisco. It is substantially as follows: Constitution and charter there was none. The government was purely military, outside of the missions. All functions, civil and military, judicial and economic, were united in the person of the commandante of a presidio, in due subjection to his superior, and so on up to the King, an autocrat, whose person was represented and whose will was executed in every part of his dominions. In the archives is a reglamento, which is a set of regulations for the Californias. Its caption expresses that it is for the government of the presidios, the promotion of the erection of new missions, and of the population and extension of the establishments of Monterey. It was drafted at Monterey by the Governor in 1779, sent to Madrid and approved by the King in 1781. It adopts the royal reglamento for the government of all the presidios, with such small variations as the circumstances of California required. The manner in which pueblos are to be founded is given; each settler to have his building lot and sowing field of two hundred varas square; the whole together to have commons for wood, water, and pasturage; also a certain number of horses, mules, oxen, cows, sheep, chickens, and farming utensils to be furnished to each; and the amount of pay—for a settler had his salary for awhile as well as his outfit. For the first five years he was to be free from the payment of tithes, but was required to sell the excess of his productions at a fixed price to the presidios, and must keep a saddle horse, carbine, and lance, and hold himself in readiness for service to the King. The only trace of a political right found in the reglamento is the allowance to the pueblos of alcaldes and other municipal officers, to be appointed by the Governor for the first two years, and afterward to be elected by the inhabitants. These officers were to see to the good government and police of the pueblos and the administration of justice, to direct the public works, apportion to each man his share of water for irrigation, and generally to enforce the provisions of the reglamento. As a check upon the abuse of their privileges the elections were subject to the approval of the Governor, who had also the power to continue to appoint the officers for three years longer if he found it necessary.

At first California formed a part of New Spain, and was governed directly by the Viceroy of Mexico. In 1776 it was attached to the commandancia general of the internal provinces, which included also Sonora, New Mexico, Chihuahua, Coahuila, and Texas. Afterward it was a part of the commandancia general of the internal provinces of the west, when Coahuila and Texas, New Leon and the colony of New Santander had been erected into another jurisdiction, under the title of the internal province of the east. This arrangement did not last many years, and California reverted to the Viceroy. Laws came from the King, in his council of the Indies, at Madrid, as orders are issued by the commander-in-chief of an army, to the second in command, to wit: the Viceroy of Mexico, from him to the next in rank, from him to the Governor of California at Monterey, and from him to the captain or lieutenant in command of a presidio. They took effect only as they were published, spreading as the courier advanced. They came slowly, but in time every order of a general nature would find its way into the archives of every province, presidio, or pueblo in North and South America under the dominion of the King of Spain. When wars, or the accidents of navigation, or the urgency of the case interrupted or rendered impossible communication with Madrid, each viceregent of the King in his department exercised the royal authority. Therefore, in the nature of things, the powers of every Governor in his province were practically despotic.

Spanish Governors of California.—The first Spanish Governor of California was Gaspar de Portala, from 1767 to 1771. He was the Governor of Lower California de facto, but de jure his jurisdiction extended over the territory to the north. It was not, however, until 1769 that he actually visited Upper California and made his residence there.

Felipe de Barri, from 1771 to 1774. The first mention found of Barri as Governor is in a letter which he addressed in that capacity from Loreto to Pedro Fajes, commander of the Presidio of Monterey, dated June 2, 1771.

Felipe de Neve, from 1774 to 1782. On December 28, 1774, Governor Barri was succeeded by Felipe de Neve, and on July 20, 1776, Governor Neve was ordered by the Viceroy to remove from Loreto to the Presidio of Monterey, and he arrived there February 3, 1777. Neve died at Chihuahua in November, 1784.

Pedro Fajes, from 1782 to 1790. Fajes became Governor September 7, 1782. He died in Mexico about 1796.

José Antonio Romeu, from 1790 to 1792. He was appointed Governor by the Viceroy, Conde de Riverra Gigado, on September 1, 1790, was put in possession on April 17, 1791, and died April 9, 1792.

José Joaquin de Arrillaga, from 1792 to 1794. He became Governor ad interim on the 9th of April, 1792, on the death of Romeu.

Diego de Borica, from 1794 to 1800. He was appointed by the Viceroy May 14, 1794, and sailed for Mexico in January, 1800, leaving Arrillaga as his successor ad interim. Borica died in Durango, July 19, 1800.

José Joaquin de Arrillaga, from 1800 to 1814. He remained Governor during that period, and died at the Mission de Soledad in Monterey County, July 25, 1814.

José Dario Arguello, from 1814 to 1815, ad interim. Died in Mexico, 1828.

Pablo Vicente de Sola, from August, 1815, to 1822.

News of the successful revolution in Mexico, under Iturbide, and of the establishment of a government independent from Spain, reached Governor Sola in 1822 and he communicated it to an assembly of ten delegates of California that was held on April 9th of that year, and it was declared that from that date the province of California was dependent alone on the Government of Mexico and independent of the dominion of Spain, as well as of any other foreign power. That declaration was as follows:

Declaration of Independence in California.—"In the Presidio of Monterey, on the 9th day of the month of April, 1822: The señor military and political Governor of this province, Colonel Don Pablo Vicente de Sola, the señors captains comandantes of the presidios of Santa Barbara and San Francisco, Don José Antonio de la Guerra y Noriega, and Don Luis Antonio de Arguello, the captains of the militia companies of the battalion of Tepic and Mazatlan, Don José Antonio Navarrete, and Don Pablo de la Portilla, the lieutenant Don José Maria Estudillo for the presidial company of San Diego, the lieutenant Don José Mariano Estrada for the presidial company of Monterey, the lieutenant of artillery, Don Manuel Gomez, and the reverend fathers, Friar Mariana Payeras and Friar Vicente Francisco de Sarria, the first as prelate of these missions, and the second as substitute of the reverend father president vicareo foranco, Friar José Jenan; having assembled in obedience to previous citations (convocatorias) in the hall of the government house, and being informed of the establishment of the kingdom of the empire, and the installation of the sovereign provisional gubernative junta in the capital of Mexico, by the official communication and other documents which the said Governor caused to be read in full assembly, said: that for themselves, and in behalf of their subordinates, they were decided to render obedience to the orders intimated by the new supreme government, recognizing from this time the province as a dependent alone of the government of the Empire of Mexico, and independent of the dominion of Spain, as well as of any other foreign power. In consideration of which, the proper oaths will be taken, in the manner prescribed by the provisional regency, to which end the superior military and political chief will give the necessary orders, and the respective comandantes of presidios and the ministers of the missions will cause the fulfillment of the same to appear by means of certificates, which will be transmitted, with a copy of this act, to the most excellent minister, to whom it corresponds."

Mexican Rule in California, 1822-1846.—During the period of the Mexican control of California the government consisted of a governor, appointed by the supreme government, with powers and duties of a limited character; a secretary; a territorial or departmental legislature, with limited powers to pass laws of a local character; a superior court (tribunal superior) of the territory, consisting of four judges and a fiscal; a prefect and sub-prefects for each district, who were charged with the preservation of public order and the execution of the laws, their duties corresponding in a great measure with those of district marshals and sheriffs; a judge of first instance for each district; alcaldes, with concurrent jurisdiction among themselves in the same district, but who were subordinate to the higher judicial tribunals; local justices of the peace; ayuntamientos, or town councils, with powers almost identical with those of corresponding officers in the cities of the United States. The province was entitled to one representative in the Mexican Congress.

California Deputados to the Mexican Congress, 1822-1846.—The following is a list and memorandum of the seven members of Congress sent from California to Mexico from 1822 to 1846:

1. Pablo Vicente de Sola, of old Spain; militaire; member from 1822 to 1826. Died in Mexico, without family, in 1827. He had been Governor under the rule of Spain and of Mexico.

2. Don José Antonio de la Guerra y Noriega; commandante of Santa Barbara. He was elected in 1827, but was put in prison in Mexico, being an old Spaniard, and was not allowed to take his seat. He returned to California in 1829, and died at Santa Barbara in 1858, leaving a large family of descendants.

3. Don José Joaquín Maitorreno; Mexican; of Santa Barbara. He was sent in 1830, but died at Tepic on his way to the capital. He was a military officer.

4. Don Carlos Antonio Carillo; Californian; of Santa Barbara; sent in 1830 and returned in 1832. Died at Santa Barbara February 25, 1852.

5. Don Juan Bandini; Peruvian; of San Diego; sent and returned in 1833. Died at Los Angeles in 1859.

6. Don José Antonio Carillo (brother of Carlos); Californian; of Los Angeles; sent in 1834 and was deputy until 1838. He was a member of the first constitutional convention, 1849, and died at Santa Barbara, April 25, 1862.

7. Don Manuel Castanares (after a considerable vacancy); of Vera Cruz, in Mexico; administrator of customs at Monterey; sent in 1842.

The deputados were allowed pay and mileage as in the case with United States Congressmen. While California was a territory the deputados had only a seat in the Congress without a vote, but after it became a department, in 1834, they had both a seat and a vote. They were elected by the territorial legislature.

Mexican Governors of California.—From the Spanish archives it appears that Sola continued to act as Governor after the declaration of independence from Spain and up to November 9, 1822. And at the same time he was the representative in the Mexican Congress. He died in Mexico in 1827.

Luis Antonio Arguello, from 1822 to 1825. Died at San Francisco, March 27, 1830.

José María de Echeandia, from 1825 to 1831. He arrived at Loreto June 25, 1825, and gave notice to Arguello that he had been appointed Governor.

Manuel Victoria, from 1831 to 1832. On January 31, 1831, he took charge of the government. On December 9, 1831, Echeandia wrote to General Vallejo that Governor Victoria was disarmed, his forces scattered, and that he was in a dying condition. On January 15, 1832, Echeandia wrote to the President of the Departmental Assembly that Victoria had left California for Mexico on the American ship Pocahontas.

Pio Pico, from 1832 to 1833. On January 11, 1832, Pico, being first Vocal of the Departmental Assembly, became Governor ad interim. The ayuntamiento of Monterey in the meantime refused to recognize him as Governor, preferring that Echeandia should act until news should be received from the supreme government. It would seem that there were two Governors, Pico acting as first Vocal of the Assembly, and Echeandia appointed by the ayuntamiento of Monterey.

José Figueroa, from 1833 to 1835. He was appointed by the President of Mexico in April, 1832; landed at Monterey January 15, 1833, and on the 25th Echeandia submitted to him. Figueroa asked to be relieved on March 25, 1833, and died at San Juan Bautista, September 29, 1835.

José Castro, from 1835 to 1836. Being first Vocal of the Departmental Assembly, he was appointed Governor by Figueroa on the 29th of August, 1835, and afterwards became Governor ad interim on the death of Figueroa.

Nicolas Gutierrez, 1836. He acted as Governor ad interim from January 2, 1836, until May.

Mariano Chico, 1836. Took charge of the government May 3, 1836; appointed by the President July 30th. He left the government in charge of Gutierrez while on a trip to Mexico to represent the popular disturbances caused by the ayuntamiento of Monterey.

Nicolas Gutierrez, 1836. Acted again as Governor ad interim from July for a few months.

Juan Bautista Alvarado, from 1836 to 1842. On November 6, 1836, the Departmental Assembly declared California a free and independent State, overthrew Gutierrez, who left the country, and Alvarado became Governor. On August 20, 1837, Antonio Carrillo wrote to Governor Alvarado that his brother Carlos Antonio Carrillo had been appointed Governor by the President. In 1838 Alvarado was appointed Governor ad interim by the supreme government, and August 7, 1839, he was appointed permanent Governor by the President. He died at San Pablo, July 13, 1882.

Manuel Micheltorena, from 1842 to 1845. He was appointed by the President and entered on the duties of the office December 30, 1842. Died in Mexico, September 7, 1853.

Pio Pico, from 1845 to 1846. He became Governor as first Vocal of the Departmental Assembly February 15, 1845. Having been recommended by the Assembly for the office in its session of the 27th of June, 1845, on September 3d of that year he was appointed constitutional Governor by the President ad interim of Mexico, and due notice of his appointment was published April 15, 1846. Died at Los Angeles, September 11, 1894.

Designs of Various Powers for the Acquisition of California.—The frequent changes of government and revolutions in both Mexico and California created a feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction among many of the native Californians, and that condition began soon after the declaration of Mexican independence. The subsequent acquisition of the territory by the United States was not an accidental incident of our war with Mexico, but the sequence of a train of causes that had been at work for half a century. Not only the United States, but England, Russia, and France had determined on acquiring California. The Russians quietly insinuated themselves upon the northern coast of California with a view to its permanent occupation. Chamberlain Resenof, of the Russian-American Fur Company, sailed from Sitka March 8, 1806, for California on a trading voyage. Before his return he determined to make a settlement on the California coast where his company could carry on trade and agriculture. He reported favorably of the country and its resources. In 1812 the Russians, under permission from Spain, established a colony at the port of Bodega, for the purpose of maintaining fisheries and hunting for furs, and as early as 1815 they had ranchos in the interior, purchased cattle from the Spaniards, and devoted themselves to the rearing of stock and the production of wheat. During the revolutionary troubles in Mexico they held themselves to have become the actual owners of the territory they occupied, and claimed practically all of the country north of San Francisco bay. They constructed a fort, which they called Stawianski, but which the Mexicans designated as the fort of the Russians. The Americans corrupted the name to Fort Ross. Over this the Russian flag was floated and a military governor appointed by the Czar was in command. These establishments were maintained until December 13, 1840, when they were sold to John A. Sutter, who had, in August of the preceding year, established his fort and settlement at Sacramento.

Louis Philippe of France, as early as 1844, advocated the establishment of a monarchy in Mexico to prevent England or the United States from getting possession of that country in case France could not obtain it. He had published, by his minister of war, the charges made by France against Mexico to justify intervention in the affairs of the latter government by France. In that paper it was pointed out that Mexico had been prosperous under the rule of Spain; that the attainment of its independence had completely reversed those happy conditions; that republican Mexico had been the enemy of France and had tyrannized over the French residents; that she had become a public nuisance and robber on the highway of nations; and that any nation, especially those having claims against her, had the right, as a matter of international policy, to interfere and establish a solid government for the country; that that could be done only by the establishment of a monarchy, and that the best citizens of Mexico desired such a change. It was added: "But there are certain conditions necessary to the success of this scheme. The new monarchs of Mexico must be Catholic, and must have family ties connecting them with the dynasties which formerly ruled in Mexico. The infantas of Spain, the French princes, and the archdukes of Austria possess these requisites, and any one of them would be unanimously welcomed by the Mexican population. The establishment of any monarchy whatsoever in Mexico is of the greatest importance to the policy of France, for a stable government erected there would at once remove the disabilities and oppression to which our commerce and citizens are subjected in that country; and this can easily be accomplished, for a column of three thousand infantry, and a few vessels of war distributed upon the Atlantic and Pacific coasts are all that is wanted to subdue the empire of Montezuma, whose conquest would be easier to-day than it was in the time of Cortes." The program of Philippe concluded with this prediction of the future greatness of the United States, after a narration of our acquisition of Texas and a reference to the probability of war between this country and Mexico: "If this (the war) takes place, the Union will command the Pacific Ocean, through that part of the Territory of Oregon which will belong to her—through California and the western coast of Mexico, Guatemala, Central America, and New Granada. On the east she will be mistress of the Atlantic coast from Canada to the Isthmus of Darien, and thus will threaten the group of islands situated at the entrance to the Gulf of Mexico and in the Caribbean Sea."

France had endeavored to qualify herself for the acquisition of California by a previous exploration of the country. In 1841 the minister of war sent one of the attachés of the French legation at Mexico, M. Dufot de Mofras, to make a thorough inspection of California with respect to its military resources, geography, agriculture, mines, population, etc. He spent two years in the work and visited every mission, village, and rancho. The results of his observations were published by the French government at the same time as the program of Philippe. In the report, de Mofras represented that the inhabitants of California were very friendly to France and desired to return to a monarchical form of government: that they hated the Americans and the English because they were of a different race and religion; that the Americans and English had set their hearts upon the acquisition of California; that England had offered to take the territory in payment of that portion of the public debt of Mexico held by English subjects, and that the United States had offered five million dollars for that portion of California lying north of a line of latitude drawn at equal distances from the bays of San Francisco and Monterey.

In 1836 the Californians revolted against Mexico, drove from the country the constitutional Governor, and declared California independent of Mexico and a free State. They raised a flag similar to that of the United States, except it had a single star. The movement was abandoned on certain concessions being made by the central government. But the people were still dissatisfied, and the Departmental Assembly in 1846 provided for the election of delegates to a junta, or extraordinary convention, to meet at Santa Barbara on June 15th of that year, to determine the destiny of California. The resident consuls of England, France, and the United States strove for favorable consideration of their respective governments. At a preliminary meeting of some of the leading men of the country there was found to be a division of opinion; those who favored annexation to the United States withdrew, and nothing further was accomplished. Within two months the territory was in the possession of the United States.

England was not idle. For several years she maintained a large fleet of war vessels on the California coast and was working out a plan that contemplated a declaration of independence of the country from Mexico, and a petition from a convention to Great Britain to be taken under her protection. In 1845 a priest named Macnamara, from Ireland, visited Mexico and made an application to the supreme power that recited that the subject of California was attracting much public attention; that prompt measures must be adopted or the province would fall into the hands of the United States; and that to avoid that he asked permission to plant a colony of ten thousand of his countrymen in the San Joaquin Valley, and for a grant of three thousand square leagues of land. In his petition were embraced the bay of San Francisco and important sections at Monterey and Santa Barbara. The Mexican government made the grant, but it was not perfected in time to become effective. Macnamara came up to California in a British sloop-of-war, and in June, 1846, reached Santa Barbara. At that time the British war vessels on the coast were under the command of Admiral George Seymour, and those of the United States of Commodore John D. Sloat. The latter had orders to take California at the first intimation of actual war between this nation and Mexico. He sailed for Monterey, followed by the British man-of-war Collingwood, and raised the American flag there July 7, 1846.

The Bear Flag Revolution, and Its Flag.—In the spring of 1846 the population of California was estimated at about ten thousand, exclusive of Indians, and the foreign population, mostly from the United States, was placed at about two thousand. The immigration of Americans had been rapidly increasing for several years, and it became apparent to the more intelligent of the Californians that this new population would, if its immigration increased in the same ratio, in a few years change the government and institutions of the country. As the outgrowth of a revolutionary movement in 1845, the Governor, Manuel Micheltorena, was deposed, the duties of that office assumed by Pio Pico, and General José Castro became the commander-in-chief of the military. The latter assumed a policy toward the foreigners that was aggressive. He promulgated a proclamation requiring all Americans to leave the country, but no immediate steps were taken to enforce the order and little attention was paid to it. About the 1st of June, 1846, Castro issued an order to Lieutenant Francisco de Arce to remove a number of government horses from the Mission San Rafael to his headquarters at Santa Clara. The officer, with a guard of fourteen men, proceeded to execute the order, and was compelled to cross the Sacramento River at New Helvetia, now Sacramento, the nearest point at which the horses could swim the stream. On his way he was seen by an Indian, who reported to the American settlers that two or three hundred armed men were advancing up the valley. At this time Captain Fremont, with his exploring party, was encamped at the Buttes, near the confluence of the Feather and Sacramento rivers, about sixty miles above Sutter's Fort. It was inferred by the settlers that the Californian force was marching north to attack Fremont. The alarm was immediately spread throughout the valley, and most of the settlers joined Fremont at his camp. There they met William Knight, who stated that he had seen the party of Californians in charge of the horses, and that de Arce had told him that Castro had sent for the horses for the purpose of mounting a battalion of two hundred men to march against the Americans settled in the Sacramento Valley and to expel them from the country; that then he proposed to fortify the Bear River pass in the mountains and prevent the further ingress of immigrants from the United States. After consultation it was resolved that a force should pursue the Californians and capture the horses, so as to weaken Castro and for the time frustrate his designs. Twelve men volunteered for the expedition, and Ezekial Merritt, the eldest of the party, was chosen captain. At daylight on the 10th of June, 1846, they surprised the Californians, who surrendered without resistance, and the horses were taken. De Arce and his men were permitted to go on without further molestation. The revolutionary movement on the part of the Americans was then fairly commenced. The party being increased to thirty-three, still under the command of Merritt, marched to Sonoma, and on the morning of the 14th of June captured and took possession of that town and military post. They made prisoners of General M. G. Vallejo, his brother Salvador, and Victor Prudon, and had them conveyed to Sutter's Fort at Sacramento for safe-keeping. As nearly as can be ascertained, the names of the members of the Bear Flag party are:

From Sacramento Valley—Ezekial Merritt, Robert Semple, Henry L. Ford, Samuel Gibson, Granville P. Swift, William Dickey, Henry Booker, John Potter, William B. Ide, William Fallon, William M. Scott, Henry Beason, William Anderson, James A. Jones, W. Barti, or "Old Red," and Samuel Neal.

From Napa Valley—Benjamin Dewell, Harvey Porterfield, John Grigsby, Frank Grigsby, William B. Elliott, Ab Elliott, William Knight, David Hudson, Franklin Bedwell, Joseph Wood, William Hargrave, Andrew Kelsey, Horace Sanders, John I. Kelly, John Gibbs, Thomas Cowie, and George Fowler.

A garrison of about eighteen men, under the command of William B. Ide, was left at Sonoma, and in a few days it was increased to about forty. On the 18th of June, Ide, with the consent of the garrison, issued a proclamation setting forth the objects for which the party had gathered and the principles that would be adhered to in the event of success. About the same time the Bear Flag was hoisted by the revolutionists.

Robert Semple, one of the members of the party, became editor of the first newspaper published in California, "The Californian," the initial number of which was issued at Monterey on August 15, 1846. In the second issue of his paper, on the 22d, he commenced the publication of a series of articles on the history of the revolution, and in the issue of February 13, 1847, the following appeared:

"THE BEAR FLAG.—Our readers will remember that we promised to make our paper a history of the country, a promise which we shall try to redeem. At this time it is a matter of great doubt in the United States where the first flag of the American revolution was hoisted and what kind of thing it was, evidently from the fact that no person thought it a matter of sufficient importance to make a record of it in such way as to transmit the facts to posterity. Our object in penning this article is to make permanent record of all the particulars of the hoisting of the Bear Flag, under the impression that, as that was the first move in revolutionizing this country, it will some time be interesting to know where, when, by whom, and what kind of flag it was. On the 14th of June, 1846, a party of Americans, without a leader, gathered and took possession of the fortified town of Sonoma, on the north side of the bay of San Francisco, and made prisoners of three Mexican officers—a general, a lieutenant-colonel, and captain. On the same day there was a partial organization under the name of the 'Republic of California,' and agreed to hoist a flag made of a piece of white cotton cloth with one red stripe on the bottom, and on the white a grizzly bear, with a single star in front of him. It was painted, or rather, stained, with lampblack and poke berries. Along the top were the words, 'Republic of California.'"

William L. Todd, in a letter to the Los Angeles "Express," under date of January 11, 1878, said: "I have to say in regard to the making of the original Bear Flag of California at Sonoma, in 1846, that when the Americans, who had taken up arms against the Spanish régime, had determined what kind of a flag should be adopted, the following persons performed the work: Granville P. Swift, Peter Storm, Henry L. Ford, and myself. We procured in the house where we made our headquarters, a piece of new unbleached cotton domestic, not quite a yard wide, with stripes of red flannel about four inches wide, furnished by Mrs. John Sears, on the lower side of the canvas. On the upper left-hand corner was a star, and in the center was the image made to represent a grizzly bear passant, so common in this country at the time. The bear and star were painted with paint made of linseed oil and Venetian red or Spanish brown. Underneath the bear were the words 'California Republic.' The other persons engaged with me got the materials together, while I acted as artist. The forms of the bear and star and the letters were first lined out with pen and ink by myself, and the two forms were filled in with the red paint, but the letters with ink. The flag mentioned by Mr. Hittell with the bear rampant was made, as I always understood, at Santa Barbara, and was painted black. Allow me to say, that at that time there was no wheelwright shop in California. The flag I painted I saw in the rooms of the California Pioneers in San Francisco, in 1870, and the Secretary will show it to any person who will call on him at any time. If it is the one that I painted, it will be known by a mistake in tinting out the words 'California Republic.' The letters were first lined out with a pen and I left out the letter 'I,' and lined out the letter 'C' in its place. But afterward I lined out the letter 'T' over the 'C' so that the last syllable of 'Republic' looks as if the last two letters were blended."

The following history of the Bear Flag is on file in the office of the Society of California Pioneers: "Captain J. C. Fremont, at the head of an exploring expedition sent out by the Government of the United States, having entered California without leave of the Mexican Government, was encamped at Mount Gabilan in February, 1846, when a dispute arose between him and a native Californian about a horse, which the latter claimed as stolen. Fremont refused to surrender the horse and defied the Mexican authorities, who had no troops that could safely attack the American riflemen. This defiance provoked a very angry feeling among the native Californians; some of whom said that the Government ought to drive all the Americans out of the country. This language repeated, converted into a threat, and represented to come from high officials, alarmed the American residents. On the 5th of June, Lieutenant de Arce, in the Mexican service, arrived at Sutter's Fort, on his way to Sonoma to get some horses, which, according to rumor, he said confidentially, were to be used by the troops in expelling the Americans. This rumor, accepted as true, seemed to demand immediate action; so messages were sent out to the Americans in the vicinity of the fort, and, at a meeting held there on the 7th, they determined to resist, and to anticipate the enemy. They sent a message to Fremont, then encamped about thirty miles off to the northward, requesting him to join his forces with theirs, become their commander, and declare war against Mexico. He rejected their invitation, but expressed sympathy with their purposes, and promised to remain in the vicinity so that he might be of some service to them. The settlers then organized themselves, under the command of Ezekial Merritt as captain, and rode to Sonoma, the only town and military post of Mexico north of the Golden Gate. Merritt, with thirty-two men, took Sonoma by surprise, and met with no resistance there; but as there were a number of native Californians in the neighborhood, he considered it prudent to send General Commandant M. G. Vallejo, Colonel Victor Prudon, Captain Salvador Vallejo and Jacob P. Leese (brother-in-law of the Vallejos, and an American, who refused to join the Rebels) to Sutter's Fort as prisoners; Merritt taking charge of the escort. After his departure, William B. Ide succeeded to the command at Sonoma. They had thus started a revolution, and it was necessary to have a flag. Mrs. John Sears supplied the muslin, and William Todd was the artist. He started by painting a single star, in imitation of the Lone Star of Texas, when H. L. Ford suggested that a grizzly bear should be used as appropriate to the country. The idea was approved by all, and the bear was painted and beneath him were the words: 'California Republic.' The paint was obtained from a wheelwright's shop, and the execution did not excel in artistic merit. The party had entered Sonoma early on the morning of Sunday, June 14th. The banner hoisted as a signal of independence, because its supporters were not authorized to use the American flag, which they greatly preferred, was taken down at Sonoma on the 11th of July, when the news of the declaration of war against Mexico by the United States, and of the seizure of California by Commodore Sloat, was received amidst general rejoicings by the Bear Flag insurgents."

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
THE SOCIETY OF CALIFORNIA PIONEERS.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the history of the Bear Flag according to the statement on file in the rooms of The Society of California Pioneers, and the accompanying cut is from a photograph by Vaughan & Keith of the original Bear Flag on exhibition in the foregoing mentioned rooms.

[SEAL.]

JOHN I. SPEAR, Secretary.

San Francisco, Cal., August 17, 1903.

Society of California Pioneers, San Francisco, California:

GENTLEMEN: At the suggestion of General Sherman, I beg leave to send to your Society herewith a guidon, formerly belonging to the Sonoma troop of the California Battalion, 1846, for preservation. This guidon I found among the effects of that troop when I hauled down the Bear Flag at Sonoma and substituted the flag of the United States at Sonoma, on the 7th of July, 1846, and have preserved it ever since.

Very respectfully, etc.,

JOSEPH W. REVERE,
Brigadier-General.

Morristown, New Jersey, February 20, 1874.

The original Bear Flag and Guidon, which were in the possession of the San Francisco Society of California Pioneers, were destroyed in the fire which occurred in San Francisco on the 18th day of April, 1906.

The half-tones herein produced are from photographs taken by Vaughan & Keith of San Francisco, and are from the only photographs ever taken. The negatives were also destroyed in the fire succeeding the earthquake in San Francisco, April 18, 1906.

But two photographs of each were taken from the negatives—one set for the use of the State in making the half-tones for the edition of the Blue Book for 1903, and the other set, in colors, for C. F. Curry, Secretary of State.

On the 7th of July Commodore Sloat sent a courier to Commander Montgomery, of the sloop-of-war Portsmouth, lying at San Francisco, notifying him of his intention to raise the American flag at Monterey, and directing him to do the same at San Francisco. On the morning of the 8th Montgomery hoisted the flag in the public square. On the 10th a flag sent by Montgomery to Sonoma was received and replaced the Bear Flag. The United States colors were soon unfurled at every principal place in northern California.

Colonel Richard B. Mason, by proclamation dated at Monterey, May 31, 1847. Died at St. Louis, Missouri, July 25, 1850.

General Bennet Riley became military Governor April 13, 1849, and served until the organization of the State government in December, 1849. Died at Buffalo, New York, June 9, 1853.

Genesis of the State Government.—News of peace between the United States and Mexico reached California August 7, 1848. A considerable population had been attracted to the country by the discovery of gold at Coloma in January of that year, and the laws of Mexico were found unsuited to the new conditions. The subject of forming a civil provisional territorial government had been agitated from the first of the year, but it did not assume an organized form until in December. On the 11th of that month a large meeting was held at San José, at which were adopted resolutions in favor of holding a convention to form a provisional territorial government to be put into immediate operation, and to remain in force until Congress should supersede it by a regular territorial organization. The action of the meeting met with the approval of the people of the northern and middle portions of the country. On December 21st and 22d, two public meetings were held at San Francisco, and resolutions were passed concurring in the plan of action suggested by the people of San José. Similar resolutions were adopted at meetings held at Sacramento on January 6th and 8th, 1849; at Monterey on the 31st, and at Sonoma on February 5th. These five districts elected delegates to the proposed convention—the district of Sacramento 5, Sonoma 10, San Francisco 5, San José 3, and Monterey 5. But the five other districts—San Joaquin, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, and San Diego—failed to concur in the movement. The San José meeting recommended that the convention should assemble at that place on the second Monday of January, 1849. The San Francisco meeting, believing that date too early to allow communication with the remote districts, recommended that it should meet on March 5th, and that was concurred in by the districts of Sonoma and Sacramento, and tacitly by San José. The district of Monterey constituted its elected delegates a committee to confer with those from the other districts to obtain a still further extension of the time of holding the convention. The Corresponding Committee, appointed in San Francisco, endeavored to spread intelligence of the action of the various meetings, but the inclemency of the weather and the impassable condition of the roads and streams had, up to January 24th, prevented all communication with the five districts that were unrepresented. On the last named date the committee issued a recommendation "that the time for the proposed assembling of the Provisional Government Convention be changed to May 1, 1849." Twelve of the delegates that had been elected to the proposed convention met at San Francisco early in March, 1849, and issued an address to the people, in which it was recommended that a new election be held for delegates to meet in convention at Monterey on the first Monday in August, and that the delegates "should be vested with full power to frame a State constitution to be submitted to the people of California." To provide for their immediate wants the citizens of Sonoma, San Francisco, and Sacramento districts elected, early in 1849, district legislative assemblies. In June the San Francisco assembly issued an address recommending the election of at least twelve delegates from that district to attend a convention at San José on the third Monday in August for the purpose of organizing a government for the whole territory of California, such conditional or temporary State government to be put into operation at the earliest practicable moment after its ratification by the people, and to become a permanent State government when admitted into the Union. Simultaneously with this action of the assembly, though without any knowledge of it, General Riley issued at Monterey a proclamation for the election of delegates to a constitutional convention.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTIONS.

FIRST CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

The first official act looking to the establishment of a State government for California was the issuance of a proclamation on June 3, 1849, by Brigadier-General Bennet Riley, U. S. A., the then Military Governor of the Territory, "recommending the formation of a State constitution or a plan for a territorial government." The convention was made to consist of thirty-seven delegates, to be chosen as follows: District of San Diego, two delegates; of Los Angeles, four; of Santa Barbara, two; of San Luis Obispo, two; of Monterey, five; of San José, five; of San Francisco, five; of Sonoma, four; of Sacramento, four; and of San Joaquin, four. The districts named were limited as follows:

San Diego, bounded on the south by Lower California, on the west by the sea, on the north by the parallel of latitude including the Mission San Juan Capistrano, and on the east by the Colorado River.

Los Angeles, bounded on the south by the District of San Diego, on the west by the sea, on the north by the Santa Clara River and a parallel of latitude running from the headwaters of that river to the Colorado.

Santa Barbara, bounded on the south by the District of Los Angeles, on the west by the sea, on the north by the Santa Ynez River and a parallel of latitude extending from the headwaters of that river to the summit of the Coast Range of mountains.

San Luis Obispo, bounded on the south by the District of Santa Barbara, on the west by the sea, on the north by a parallel of latitude including San Miguel, and on the east by the Coast Range of mountains.

Monterey, bounded on the south by the District of San Luis Obispo, and on the north and east by a line running east from New Year's Point to the summit of the Santa Clara range of mountains; thence along the summit of that range to the Arroyo de Los Leagas, and a parallel of latitude extending to the summit of the Coast Range, and along that range to the District of San Luis Obispo.

San José, bounded on the north by the straits of Carquinez, the bay of San Francisco, the Arroyo of San Francisquito, and a parallel of latitude to the summit of the Santa Clara mountains; on the west and south by the Santa Clara mountains and the District of Monterey, and on the east by the Coast Range.

San Francisco, bounded on the west by the sea, on the south by the Districts of San José and Monterey, and on the east and north by the bay of San Francisco, including the islands in that bay.

Sonoma included all the country bounded by the sea, the bays of San Francisco and Suisun, the Sacramento River, and Oregon.

Sacramento, bounded on the north and west by the Sacramento River, on the east by the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and on the south by the Cosumnes River.

San Joaquin included all the country south of the Sacramento District, and lying between the Coast Range and the Sierra Nevadas.

The election for delegates was held on August 1, 1849. The convention met in Colton Hall, in the town of Monterey, at 12 o'clock M. on Saturday, September 1, 1849, and adjourned on Saturday, October 13, 1849. The convention admitted to seats quite a number of delegates in excess of those contemplated in the proclamation of General Riley. On organization the following were chosen officers of the body: President, Robert Semple; Secretary, William G. Marcy; Assistant Secretaries, Caleb Lyon and J. G. Field; Reporter, J. Ross Browne; Sergeant-at-Arms, J. S. Houston; Doorkeeper, Cornelius Sullivan; Interpreter and Translator, W. E. P. Hartnell; Clerk to Interpreter and Translator, W. H. Henrie. The Constitution framed by the convention was adopted by the people at an election held November 13, 1849.

| The apportionment of May 1, 1851, provided for 27 Senators, and did not contemplate for a hold-over Senator in place of Adams, resigned. The Governor, in the election proclamation of July 28, 1851, directed that Butte and Shasta should elect a Senator, vice Adams, in addition to one from each of those counties. Lewis was elected and his claim to a seat was referred to a committee of the Senate. January 6, 1852, the committee reported that he was entitled to a seat, vice Adams, and he qualified, thus increasing the membership of the Senate from 27 to 28. Died at Oroville, June 26, 1869. |                                          |                        |

UNITED STATES SENATORS.

Five days after the convening of the first Legislature, and on December 20, 1849, two United States Senators were elected—JOHN C. FREMONT and WILLIAM M. GWIN. They received their credentials and proceeded to Washington, but it was not until September 10, 1850, the day after the admission of California into the Union, that they were sworn in as members of the Senate. Fremont drew the short term, to expire March 4, 1851, and Gwin the long term, to expire March 4, 1855. They served out the periods for which they had been elected.

As the law stood until July 25, 1866, the time for the meeting of the joint convention of the State Senate and Assembly, was fixed by a joint resolution of the two houses, and by reason of inability to agree there were sessions that failed to elect a United States Senator, and the State was at times with but one representative in the upper house of Congress. The following shows the successions in the United States Senate from California after the elections for the full term of six years:

Term March 4, 1851, to March 4, 1857.—The Legislature of 1851 failed to elect a successor to Fremont. January 30, 1852, JOHN B. WELLER, Democrat, was elected and served for the remainder of the term.

Term March 4, 1855, to March 4, 1861.—The Legislatures of 1855 and 1856 failed to elect a successor to Gwin. January 13, 1857, WILLIAM M. GWIN, Democrat, was elected to succeed himself, and served for the remainder of the term.

Term March 4, 1857, to March 4, 1863.—January 10, 1857, DAVID C. BRODERICK, Democrat, was elected to succeed Weller. He died in office September 16, 1859, and on October 26th, Governor Weller appointed HENRY P. HAUN, Democrat. January 11, 1860, the Legislature elected MILTON S. LATHAM, Democrat, and he served out the remainder of the term.

Term March 4, 1861, to March 4, 1867.—April 2, 1861, JAMES A. McDUGALL, Douglas Democrat, was elected to succeed Gwin, and served the full term.

Term March 4, 1863, to March 4, 1869.—February 10, 1863, JOHN CONNESS, Union, was elected to succeed Latham, and served the full term.

Term March 4, 1867, to March 4, 1873.—December 16, 1865, CORNELIUS COLE, Union, was elected to succeed McDougall, and served the full term.

REPRESENTATIVES IN CONGRESS.

Apportionment.—The Constitution of 1849 provided that at the election on November 13th of that year there should be elected two Representatives in Congress at large. Until 1861 the State was represented in Congress by two Representatives elected at large, and there was no official districting. Under the apportionment based on the Federal census of 1860 California was entitled to three Representatives, and in 1861 the State Central Committees of the various political parties agreed to place on each ticket an additional candidate for Congressman. In that year and in 1863 the three members were elected at large.

The Legislature by an Act of April 1, 1864, apportioned the State into three congressional districts, the first embracing the southern, the second the middle, and the third the northern counties.

By an Act of March 30, 1872, the State was divided into four congressional districts; by an Act of March 13, 1883, into six; by an Act of March 11, 1891, into seven; and by an Act of March 23, 1901, into eight.

Time of Election.—April 26, 1851, the Legislature passed an Act fixing the time for holding the general State elections on the first Wednesday in September of each year, except in years in which presidential elections were to be held, when the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November was set.

The following Acts fixing the time for the election of Representatives in Congress have been passed since by the Legislature: April 24, 1852, setting the time at the general election in 1852, and each second year thereafter; April 15, 1858, setting the time at the general election in 1859, and each second year thereafter; April 20, 1863, setting the time at the general election in 1863, and each second year thereafter, except that in leap years it should be held at the time of the presidential elections; April 1, 1864, setting the time at the presidential election in that year, and each second year thereafter at the general elections; March 13, 1866, setting the time at the general election in 1867; March 11, 1868, setting the time at the presidential election in that year; April 4, 1870, setting the time at the general election in 1871; April 1, 1872, setting the time at the presidential election in that year.

Congress passed an Act on March 3, 1873, fixing the time for the election of Representatives in Congress at the presidential election in 1876, and each second year thereafter on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. The original Political Code adopted by the Legislature of 1871-72 provided for the election of Representatives at the general election in 1873 and each second year thereafter. Congress, by an Act on May 21, 1874, repealed the Federal law so far as the election of Congressmen in California was concerned, and the Code provision governed the election in 1875. The election in 1876 was held in conformity with the Federal law. Congress, on June 11, 1878, passed an Act that the congressional election in California should be held on the first Wednesday in September, 1879. Since that time the elections have been held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in each even-numbered year, in conformity with the provisions of the Federal law.

At the January term, 1877, the State Supreme Court directed that a peremptory writ of mandate issue to the Secretary, commanding him to canvass the vote as it had been transmitted to his office by the County Clerks, and to issue a certificate to the person thus shown to have received the highest number of votes. In accordance with this decision the certificate of election was issued to Pacheco, and he proceeded to Washington, and there took the oath of office on December 3, 1877. ## EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following is a synopsis of the constitutional provisions and laws relating to the principal executive State offices, which have been in force since the organization of the State government:

GOVERNOR.

Election and Term.—The original Constitution provided that at the election at which it was to be submitted to the people—November 13, 1849—there should be elected a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, members of the Legislature, and two members of Congress. All the State officers, except members of the Legislature, were to take office December 15th following, or as soon thereafter as practicable, and their term was fixed at two years. The first Legislature, on April 11, 1850, passed a law providing for the election of the next Governor at the general election in 1851; and by an Act passed on March 23, 1850, the general elections were set for the first Monday in October of each year. On April 26, 1851, an amendatory Act was passed, changing the time for holding the general State elections to the first Wednesday in September of each year. The amendments to the Constitution, in 1862, extended the term of office of the Governor to four years from the first Monday in December next after election, and the general State elections were set for the first Wednesday in September in each alternate year, commencing with 1863. The Constitution adopted in 1879 provided for the election of the first Governor under it on the first Wednesday in September, 1879, for a term of three years from the first Monday after the first day of January, 1880; and afterwards for general elections on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1880, and each second year thereafter. The term of office of Governor, commencing with the one elected in 1882, was fixed at four years from the first day of January following the election.

Salary.—The Constitution of 1849 fixed the salary of the Governor at $10,000 per annum, to so remain until changed by the Legislature. On May 1, 1851, the salary was fixed at $6,000; on May 11, 1852, at $10,000; on April 21, 1856, at $6,000; and on May 6, 1861, at $7,000. The Constitution of 1879 fixed the salary at $6,000.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

Election and Term.—The Constitution always provided for the election of a Lieutenant-Governor at the same time as the Governor and for the same term. The Lieutenant-Governor has always been ex officio President of the Senate, and for a time in the history of the State acted also as Warden of the State Prison. In the event of a vacancy in the office of Governor it was provided that the Lieutenant-Governor should be promoted to that office, and the President pro tem. of the Senate should act as Lieutenant-Governor. Under the present Constitution, a vacancy in the office of Lieutenant-Governor is filled by appointment by the Governor. (People ex rel. John C. Lynch vs. James H. Budd, Governor, 114 Cal. 168.)

Salary.—The original Constitution fixed the compensation of the Lieutenant-Governor at $32 per day during the session of the Legislature, with mileage. By an Act passed May 1, 1851, the compensation was fixed at $15 per day and mileage; on April 21, 1856, at $12 per day and mileage; and on April 23, 1880, at $10 per day and mileage; these per diems to be paid only during the legislative session.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

Election and Term.—The Constitution of 1849 provided that the Secretary of State should be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to hold office for two years. The constitutional amendment of 1862 provided that the Secretary of State should be elected by the people at the same time the Governor was chosen and for the same term. Under the present Constitution the Secretary of State is elected at the same time and for the same term as the Governor.

Salary.—On March 5, 1850, a law was passed fixing the salary of the Secretary of State at $7,000. On May 1, 1851, it was fixed at $3,500; and on May 6, 1861, at $4,000. Under the present Constitution the salary is $3,000.

TREASURER.

Election and Term.—The first Constitution provided that the Legislature should, in joint convention, at the first session, elect a Treasurer, to hold office for the same term as the Governor; and that thereafter the office should be filled by election by the people. The first Legislature, by an Act passed April 11, 1850, provided for the election of a Treasurer at the general election in 1851, and each second year thereafter. The amendment of 1862 lengthened the term of the Treasurer to four years, from the first Monday in December next after the election, which was set at the same time as the election of Governor. Under the present Constitution the Treasurer is elected at the same time and for the same term as the Governor.

Salary.—The first Legislature, by an Act passed March 5, 1850, fixed the salary of the Treasurer at $9,000. On May 1, 1851, it was fixed at $5,000; on May 11, 1852, at $4,500; on April 21, 1856, at $3,500; and on May 6, 1861, at $4,000. Under the present Constitution the salary is $3,000.

CONTROLLER.

Election and Term.—The same provisions as regard the Treasurer.

Salary.—By an Act of March 5, 1850, the salary of the Controller was fixed at $8,000; May 1, 1851, at $5,000; May 11, 1852, at $4,500; April 21, 1856, at $3,500; May 6, 1861, at $4,000; and under the new Constitution at $3,000.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Election and Term.—The same provisions as regard the Treasurer.

Salary.—The salary of the Attorney-General has been fixed as follows: By an Act of March 5, 1850, $7,000; May 1, 1851, $1,000; May 11, 1852, $2,000; May 6, 1861, $4,000; by the new Constitution, $3,000.

SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

CLERK OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Election and Term.—A law was passed February 14, 1850, establishing the office of Clerk of the Supreme Court, and providing that the first incumbent should be elected by the Legislature, that the next Clerk should be elected by the people at the first county election, to be held on the first Monday in April, 1850, to hold office until January 1, 1851. On April 11, 1850, an amendatory law was passed, providing for the election of a Clerk at the general election in October, 1850, and every two years thereafter, to take office on January 1st following each election. On April 28, 1851, a law was passed providing that the Clerk elected in October, 1850, should hold office until January 1, 1853, and that a Clerk should be elected at the general election in 1852, and every two years thereafter, to hold office commencing on the first day of January next after the election. On April 24, 1858, an Act was passed providing that a Clerk should be elected at the general election in 1859, and each second year thereafter, to hold office for two years from the first day of January after his election. On April 22, 1863, an Act was passed providing for the election of the Clerk at the same time as the Governor, and to hold office for four years from the first Monday in December after his election. The present Constitution provides that the Legislature shall fix the time for the election of the Clerk, and the Political Code provides that that officer shall be elected at the same time as the Governor, and shall hold office for four years from the first Monday in December next succeeding the election.

Salary.—The salary of the Clerk was $4,000 until the adoption of the new Constitution, when it was fixed at $3,000.

SUPERINTENDENT OF STATE PRINTING.

Election and Term.—By an Act passed January 8, 1850, the office of State Printer was created, to be filled and controlled by the Legislature; the term was fixed at two years. The Act of April 11, 1850, provided that the Printer should be elected by the Legislature for the same term. On April 29, 1852, a law was passed abolishing the office of State Printer, and the Governor and Controller were authorized to let a contract to do the State printing for a period of nine months from May 1, 1852. On May 1, 1854, the office of State Printer was again created, and it was provided that it should be filled by election by the then Legislature, and that at the general election in 1855, and every two years thereafter, that officer should be elected by the people. On April 22, 1863, provision was made for the election of the Printer by the people, at the same time as the Governor, and for the same term. On March 26, 1872, the office of Superintendent of State Printing was created, and that law took effect at the expiration of the term of the then State Printer. The appointment was to be made by the Governor on or before the first Monday in September, 1875, and no term of office was specified. By an Act of March 10, 1891, the Superintendent of State Printing was made an elective officer.

Salary.—Originally the compensation of the State Printer was governed by the amount of work performed, but under the law creating the office of Superintendent, the salary was fixed at $3,000. On March 30, 1874, it was reduced to $2,400, and on March 9, 1885, it was increased again to $3,000.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

Election and Term.—The original Constitution directed the Legislature to provide for the election by the people of a Superintendent of Public Instruction, to hold office for three years. On April 11, 1850, an Act was passed providing for the election of the Superintendent at the general election in 1850, and every third year thereafter. By an Act passed May 1, 1851, it was provided that at the general election in 1853 the people should elect a Superintendent for the constitutional term, and that the Superintendent who had been elected in 1850 should hold office until January 1, 1854, and thereafter the term should be three years from the first day of January next after the election. The constitutional amendment of 1862 provided that the Superintendent should be elected at a special election, at which only judicial and school officers should be elected, and that the date of the election should be designated by the Legislature of 1863. The term of office was fixed at four years from the first day of December next after the election. On March 21, 1863, a law was passed providing that such special election should be held on the third Wednesday in October, 1863, and every second year thereafter. The present Constitution provides that the Superintendent shall be elected at the same time as the Governor, and for the same term.

Salary.—On May 11, 1852, the salary of the School Superintendent was fixed at $4,500, to be paid from the commencement of the term of office then existing. On April 25, 1856, it was fixed at $3,500, and on May 6, 1861, it was reduced to $3,000, and has not since been changed.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL.

Election and Term.—On April 10, 1850, an Act was passed providing that the Legislature should elect on joint ballot an Adjutant-General and a Quartermaster-General, each to rank as a brigadier-general, and to hold office until January 1, 1854. April 25, 1855, an Act was passed providing that the Legislature should elect on joint ballot a Quartermaster-General, who should perform the duties of Adjutant-General as well, with the rank of brigadier-general, and to hold office for four years. The first election was to take place on or after the first day of April, 1858, when the term of the then incumbent would expire. May 9, 1861, an Act was passed providing that the Adjutant-General should be appointed by the Commander-in-Chief of the National Guard (the Governor), by and with the consent of the Senate, and to hold office for the same time as the Secretary of State. April 24, 1862, the term of office was fixed at two years by an amendatory statute; and by Act of April 25, 1863, the term was increased to four years. The Political Code provides that the Adjutant-General shall be appointed by the Governor, to hold office at the pleasure of the appointing power. The office of Adjutant-General always carried with it the rank of major-general, except during the period when the Act of April 15, 1880, was in effect—from that date to March 12, 1885, when it was repealed.

Salary.—The Act of April 10, 1850, fixed the salary at $1,000 for the Adjutant-General and $2,000 for the Quartermaster-General; April 25, 1855, the salary of the Quartermaster-General and Adjutant-General was fixed at $3,000; May 9, 1861, the salary of the Adjutant-General was fixed at $1,000, but on the 17th of that month it was raised to $2,000 by an amendatory Act. By Act of April 24, 1862, the salary was fixed at $3,000, and it has not since been changed.

STATE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

By an Act of the Legislature, approved April 4, 1870, a State Board of Equalization was created, to consist of the Controller of the State and two members to be appointed by the Governor.

This remained the law until the establishment of the Codes in 1872, wherein Section 352 of the Political Code provided that the Controller of the State should be ex officio member of the board, and the other members to be appointed by the Governor. Section 352 of said Code was amended by an Act of the Legislature, approved April 1, 1876, and provided that the board should consist of the Governor, Controller, and Attorney-General; that the Governor, and in his absence the Controller, should be chairman of the board.

Article XIII, Section 9, of the Constitution of 1879, as originally ratified, provided that the board should consist of one member from each congressional district in the State, to be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts at the general election to be held in 1879, whose term of office, after those first elected, should be four years, and that the Controller of the State should be ex officio a member of the board.

At the time of the adoption and ratification of this constitutional provision the State was divided into four congressional districts, and although this section of the Constitution was amended in 1885, such amendment did not change the apportionment of the State, the number of members of the board, nor their terms of office, but provided that the Legislature shall have power to redistrict the State into four districts as nearly equal in population as practicable, and to provide for the election of the members of said board. Since the adoption of such amendment the Legislature has not passed any law changing the boundaries of the equalization districts.

By an Act of the Legislature, approved April 3, 1880, Section 352 of the Political Code was amended to conform to the constitutional provision, and provides that they shall elect one of their members as chairman, to hold such office during their pleasure.

By an Act of the Legislature, approved March 19, 1907, adding a new section to the Political Code, numbered 125, the counties comprising the several equalization districts are designated, but does not alter the boundaries thereof, as provided for in the Constitution.

Salary.—Section 3700 of the Political Code provides that the salary of each of the members (except the Controller) shall be $3,000.

COMMISSIONER OF TRANSPORTATION.

The Act of the Legislature, approved April 3, 1876, provided that the Governor should appoint three persons as Commissioners of Transportation, to hold office for a period of two years, to have their office in the State Capitol, at Sacramento, and to receive an annual salary of $3,000.

The Act of the Legislature, approved April 1, 1878, repealed the Act of 1876, and also provided that the Governor should appoint one person to be styled Commissioner of Transportation, to be the legal successor of the board appointed under the Act of 1876, such Commissioner to hold office for a period of four years, whose office should be in the State Capitol, and to receive an annual salary of $4,000.

The Act of the Legislature, approved April 15, 1880, provided that the Commissioner appointed under the Act of 1878 should deliver all public property belonging to his office, in his possession or under his control, to the Board of Railroad Commissioners elected pursuant to the provisions of Section 22, of Article XII, of the Constitution of 1879.

RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS.

Section 22, of Article XII, of the Constitution of 1879, provides that the State shall be divided into three districts, as nearly equal in population as practicable, in each of which one Railroad Commissioner shall be elected by the qualified electors thereof at the regular gubernatorial elections, and whose term of office shall be four years, commencing on the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding their election, who shall be qualified electors of the district from which they are elected, and not interested in any railroad or other transportation corporation or company.

Section 23, of Article XII, of the Constitution designates the counties comprising the several railroad districts, until the Legislature shall district the State, and until the Act approved April 19, 1907, adding Section 130 to the Political Code, the Legislature passed no law dividing the State into railroad districts. The provisions of Section 130, of said Code, simply conform to Section 23, of Article XII, of the Constitution, making no change in the formation of the districts.

Salary.—The Act of the Legislature, approved April 15, 1880, provides that the salary of each Commissioner shall be $4,000; that they shall elect one of their number president of the board; that the office of said board shall be in the City and County of San Francisco, where they shall hold sessions at least once a month, and at such other times and places within the State as may be expedient, after public notice is given by publication once a week, for two successive weeks, in a newspaper published in the county where such session is to be held.

STATE LIBRARIAN.

Election and Term.—January 19, 1850, the Senate adopted a resolution of thanks to John C. Fremont for the presentation by him to the State of one hundred volumes. These books consisted of works on law, medicine, travel, and exploration, and governmental reports. They formed the nucleus of the State Library. On April 9, 1850, an Act was passed providing that all books then in the possession of the State or that might thereafter come into its possession should be kept in the office of the Secretary of State, and that that officer should be ex officio State Librarian. March 8, 1861, an Act was passed providing that the State Library should be under the control of five trustees, the Governor and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court to be ex officio members, and the others to be John R. McConnell, Joseph W. Winans, and Solomon Heydenfeldt. They were to hold office for four years, and their successors were to be elected by the Legislature in joint convention, but the Governor was to fill vacancies when the Legislature was not in session. The board was empowered to elect a State Librarian, to hold office for four years. On March 21, 1864, this Act was amended to give the management and control of the Library to five trustees, the Governor and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court to be ex officio members, and the others to be Dr. John F. Morse, Joseph W. Winans, and Dr. Harvey W. Harkness. They were to hold office for four years, and their successors were to be elected by the Legislature in joint convention. February 28, 1866, an Act was passed giving the direction and control of the Library to five trustees, the Attorney-General to be an ex officio member, and the others to be Joseph W. Winans, Dr. Harvey W. Harkness, C. G. W. French, and William C. Belcher. They were to hold office for four years, and their successors were to be elected by the Legislature in joint convention. The original Political Code provided that the Library should be under the control and direction of five trustees, to be elected by the Legislature in joint convention and for a term of four years. The board was empowered to elect a Librarian for a term of four years. February 25, 1899, an Act was passed creating a Board of five Library Trustees, to be appointed by the Governor for a term of four years. Three members were to be appointed for a full term after February 28, 1902, and two for a term of two years from that date. Thereafter the successors are to be appointed for the full term. The board is empowered to elect a Librarian for the term of four years.

Salary.—The Act of March 8, 1861, fixed the salary of the State Librarian at $2,500; and since the adoption of the Codes the salary has been $3,000.

GEORGE W. WHITMAN, American, elected September 5, 1855; took office January 7, 1856. On February 13, 1857, a resolution was passed by the Assembly impeaching Whitman for misdemeanor in office, and on the 24th, articles of impeachment were reported by a committee; the Senate, on March 9th, convened as a high court of impeachment, and on April 21st Whitman was acquitted. Governor Johnson had, on February 25th, appointed EDWARD F. BURTON, American, Controller, and he performed the duties of the office until the acquittal of Whitman. Burton died at Denver, Colorado, May 11, 1891.

At the election held September 2, 1857, JAMES W. MANDEVILLE, Democrat, was elected Controller, but he did not qualify, having been appointed United States Surveyor-General for California a few days before the election. On January 21, 1858, Governor Weller nominated SAMUEL H. BROOKS, Democrat, for the office, but the Senate refused to confirm, and on the 27th the Governor withdrew the nomination, explaining that it "had been made under a misapprehension of some material facts." On February 4th, the Governor nominated AARON R. MELONEY for the office, and the Senate confirmed. Afterwards, on April 26, because some doubts had been expressed in regard to the regularity of the appointment, the Governor again nominated Meloney, and he was again confirmed. Whitman refused to surrender the office, claiming that he was entitled to hold until his successor should be elected and should qualify, and that as Mandeville had been elected, the Governor had no right to appoint. The matter was taken to the Supreme Court, and a final decision was rendered in Meloney's favor at the July term, 1858. He took office by virtue of this appointment and decision on October 12, 1858. Whitman died in Contra Costa County in 1891.

AARON R. MELONEY, Lecompton Democrat, elected September 1, 1858, to serve out the unexpired term. Died at Lafayette, Contra Costa County, March 1, 1861. (See State Senators.)

Kenfield and Brown were voted for to fill the vacancy, and Kenfield received a majority of about 3,000. Governor Irwin declined to issue a commission to him upon the ground that no proclamation had been issued calling for the election of a Controller. Kenfield applied for a writ of mandate to compel the issuance of the commission, but his petition was dismissed by the Supreme Court at the April term, 1877. Brown died at Sacramento, April 12, 1882.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

STATE SUPREME COURT.

The original Constitution of California, adopted in 1849, provided for a Supreme Court, to consist of a Chief Justice and two Associate Justices. It further provided, in Section 3, of Article VI: "The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected at the general election by the qualified electors of the State, and shall hold their offices for a term of six years from the first day of January next after the election; provided, that the Legislature shall, at its first meeting, elect a Chief Justice and two Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, by joint vote of both houses, and so classify them that one shall go out of office every two years. After the first election the senior Justice in commission shall be the Chief Justice."

The first Legislature, on February 14, 1850, passed an Act to organize the court. It was provided that one Justice should be elected in 1851, one every second year thereafter, and that the Governor should fill vacancies by commission, which should expire at the subsequent general election, when the vacancy should be filled by an election for the remainder of the unexpired term. On the 28th an Act was passed authorizing the Clerk of the Supreme Court to rent a suitable room in San Francisco for the March term, 1850, provided that the rent of such room should not exceed $1,000 per month. On March 5th the Legislature fixed the salary of each Justice at $10,000 per annum. On April 13th an Act was passed providing for certain special terms in San Francisco, and that afterwards the sessions of the court should be held at the seat of government.

In accordance with the provisions of the Constitution above quoted, the first Legislature, on December 22, 1849, elected S. CLINTON HASTINGS Chief Justice, HENRY A. LYONS first Associate Justice, and NATHANIEL BENNETT second Associate Justice. On February 1, 1850, the Legislature passed a resolution classifying the Justices so that Hastings should go out of office at the end of two years from January 1, 1850, Lyons at the end of four years, and Bennett at the end of six years from that date. On March 11, 1851, a law was passed to have one Justice elected in 1852, and one at the general election every second year thereafter; but on April 28th another Act was passed providing for the election of one in 1851, and one every second year thereafter. This Legislature also passed a law providing that the terms of court, until January 1, 1852, should be held in San Francisco, and after that at the seat of government. On May 24th an Act was passed providing that thereafter the sessions of the court should be held at the capital of the State. The salaries of the Justices were reduced to $6,000 each on April 21, 1856.

Justice Hastings served out his term, and at the general election held September 3, 1851, SOLOMON HEYDENFELDT, Democrat, was elected to succeed him. Heydenfeldt took office January 1, 1852, and resigned January 6, 1857. Governor Johnson, on the 13th, appointed PETER H. BURNETT to fill the vacancy, and he resigned October 12, 1857. On the 13th, Governor Johnson appointed STEPHEN J. FIELD, Democrat, to serve out the unexpired term. Field had been elected on September 2, 1857, for the full term. This term began on January 1, 1858. In 1863, President Lincoln appointed Field one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, and on May 20th of that year he resigned his seat on the California bench. The next day Governor Stanford appointed EDWIN B. CROCKER, Republican, to fill the vacancy, and he served until the taking effect of the constitutional amendments of 1862.

Justice Lyons resigned March 31, 1852, and on April 2d Governor Bigler appointed ALEXANDER ANDERSON to fill the vacancy, and he qualified on the 6th. At the general election on November 2, 1852, ALEXANDER WELLS, Democrat, was elected for this short term, and he took his seat on the bench January 3, 1853. Wells was re-elected for the full term, September 7, 1853, and he assumed office by virtue of that election January 4, 1854. He died October 31, 1854, and on November 24th Governor Bigler appointed CHARLES H. BRYAN, Democrat, to fill the vacancy. At the general election held September 5, 1855, DAVID S. TERRY, American, was elected by the people, and he assumed office on November 15th. Terry resigned September 12, 1859. On the 20th Governor Weller appointed W. W. COPE, Lecompton Democrat, to fill the vacancy. Cope had been elected for the full term at the election held on September 7, 1859, and he took office under that election on January 2d following, and served until the remodeling of the court in 1864.

Justice Bennett resigned October 3, 1851, and on the 11th Governor McDougal appointed HUGH C. MURRAY, Democrat, to fill the vacancy. On November 2, 1852, Murray was elected to succeed himself, and he took office by virtue of that election on January 3d following. Murray was elected for the full term on September 5, 1855, but died September 18, 1857, and Governor Johnson appointed PETER H. BURNETT on October 14th to succeed him. At the election on September 1, 1858, JOSEPH G. BALDWIN, Lecompton Democrat, was elected to fill the remainder of the vacancy, and he assumed office on October 2, 1858. On September 4, 1861, EDWARD NORTON, Republican, was elected for the full term, and took office on January 6th following. He served until the change was effected by the adoption of the constitutional amendments of 1862.

In 1862 the State Constitution was amended to constitute the Supreme Court of a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices, and it provided that the Justices should be elected at special elections, to be provided for by law, at which elections only judicial and school officers should be elected. It provided further: "The first election for Justices of the Supreme Court shall be held in the year 1863. The Justices shall hold their offices for the term of ten years from the first day of January next after their election, except those elected at the first election, who, at their first meeting, shall so classify themselves, by lot, that one Justice shall go out of office every two years. The Justice having the shortest term to serve shall be Chief Justice."

On March 21, 1863, the Legislature passed an Act providing that there should be held on the third Wednesday in October, 1863, and every two years thereafter, an election, to be called the "Special Judicial Election," at which should be elected the Supreme Justices and other judicial and school officers. On April 20th an Act was passed to provide for the organization of the new court, and it was enacted that when a vacancy should occur the Governor should fill it by the appointment of a person who should hold until the next judicial election, and the Justice elected by the people at such election should hold office for the balance of the unexpired term. It was also provided that the terms of the court should be held at the seat of government. The salaries of the Justices were fixed at $6,000 each.

Under this constitutional provision, on October 21, 1863, OSCAR L. SHAFTER, LORENZO SAWYER, SILAS W. SANDERSON, JOHN CURREY, and A. L. RHODES—all Union—were elected Supreme Court Justices. The new court organized January 2, 1864, and in accordance with law the Justices drew lots to determine the tenure of their official terms, with the following result: Shafter drew for ten years, Rhodes for eight, Sawyer for six, Currey for four, and Sanderson for two.

Sanderson was elected to succeed himself October 18, 1865, and resigned January 4, 1870. On the 8th, Governor Haight appointed JACKSON TEMPLE, Democrat, to fill the vacancy, and he assumed office on the 10th. October 18, 1871, ADDISON C. NILES, Republican, was elected. He took office January 1st following, and remained on the bench until the new Constitution took effect.

ROYAL T. SPRAGUE, Democrat, was elected to succeed Currey October 16, 1867; took office January 6, 1868. He died February 24, 1872. On the 4th of March Governor Booth appointed ISAAC S. BELCHER to fill the vacancy. October 15, 1873, ELISHA W. MCKINSTRY, Independent, was elected and took office January 12, 1874, and served until the reorganization of the court under the new Constitution.

October 20, 1869, WILLIAM T. WALLACE, Democrat, was elected to succeed Sawyer. He assumed office January 10, 1870, and served until the new Constitution effected a change in the court.

October 18, 1871, Rhodes was elected to succeed himself, and served until the new court came in.

Shafter resigned December 11, 1867, and Governor Haight appointed JOSEPH B. CROCKETT, Democrat, to succeed him. October 20, 1869, Crockett was elected to succeed himself, and served until the change was effected by the new Constitution.

In 1879 the people adopted the new Constitution, which constituted the Supreme Court of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, and it provided: "The Chief Justice and the Associate Justices shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at large, at the general State elections, at the time and places at which State officers are elected, and the term of office shall be twelve years from and after the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding their election; provided, that the six Associate Justices elected at the first election shall, at their first meeting, so classify themselves, by lot, that two of them shall go out of office at the end of four years, two of them at the end of eight years, and two of them at the end of twelve years, and an entry of such classification shall be made in the minutes of the court in bank, signed by them, and a duplicate thereof shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. If a vacancy occur in the office of a Justice, the Governor shall appoint a person to hold the office until the election and qualification of a Justice to fill the vacancy, which election shall take place at the next succeeding general election, and the Justice so elected shall hold the office for the remainder of the unexpired term. The first election of the Justices shall be at the first general election after the adoption and ratification of this Constitution."

September 3, 1879, ROBERT F. MORRISON, Democrat and Workingmen's Party, was elected Justice, and SAMUEL BELL MCKEE, ERSKINE M. ROSS, JOHN R. SHARPSTEIN, J. D. THORNTON, ELISHA W. MCKINSTRY, and M. H. MYRICK—all Democrats and Workingmen's Party, except Myrick, Republican—Associate

BEATTY, Republican, was elected, and served out the remainder of the term. November 4, 1890, WILLIAM H. ### DISTRICT COURTS OF APPEAL.

At the thirty-fifth session of the Legislature, on March 14, 1903, an amendment was proposed to certain sections of Article VI of the Constitution, relating to the Judicial Department of the State, the purpose of which was to submit to a vote of the people a plan to create three District Courts of Appeal and to define the jurisdiction thereof. Section 25 of the proposed amendment provided for abolishing the Supreme Court Commission at the expiration of its then term of office. Section 4 provided that upon the ratification of the amendment the Governor should appoint nine persons as Justices of these courts until the first Monday after the first day of January, in the year 1907. It also provided that at the election in 1906, nine of such Justices should be elected, and the Justices of each District Court should so classify themselves, by lot, that one of them should go out of office at the end of four years, one at the end of eight years, and one at the end of twelve years. This amendment was adopted at the general election on the 8th day of November, 1904.

THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT OF CALIFORNIA.

By HON. N. P. CHIPMAN,

Presiding Justice of the District Court of Appeal for the Third District.

By Article IV of the Constitution of 1849 the judicial power of this State was vested in a Supreme Court, in District Courts, in County Courts, and in Justices of the Peace, and such municipal and other inferior courts as the Legislature may establish. The Supreme Court was to consist of a Chief Justice and two Associate Justices when first organized. By an amendment in 1862 the number of Associate Justices was increased to four.

The Supreme Court.—Under the Constitution of 1879 the Supreme Court now consists of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices. District Courts, County Courts, sitting also as Probate Courts, were abolished and Superior Courts substituted.

There are now two departments in the Supreme Court, each composed of three Justices, and three Justices must concur to render a decision. The court also sits in bank, when the concurrence of four Justices is necessary to a decision. The decisions of departments are final, unless a hearing in bank is granted.

The State was peculiarly fortunate in the high character and recognized ability of the Justices selected to organize and conduct the judicial department of government in the earlier and formative period of its existence. Equally so, I may say, as to most of the Justices who have succeeded to this high trust. Our Supreme Court has ranked well to the front among the more distinguished courts of last resort in this country.

Owing to the ability of our Justices, and because of the many and new questions growing out of the somewhat peculiar conditions here (for example, questions relating to mining and the use of water for power and irrigation, and questions arising out of our law of descent and domestic relations and ownership of real property), the decisions of our Supreme Court have been referred to and followed to an extent equaled only by a few of the large states of the Union.

In 1885 the business of the court had become so congested that Commissioners were provided for by the Legislature, at first three in number, and in 1889 increased to five, to assist the court in its work. These Commissioners were selected with reference to their learning in the law, and their duties were in all respects similar to those of the Justices of the court, except that before their decisions became operative they were to receive the approval of three Justices if the case was in a department, and four if in bank. Such distinguished jurists as Niles Searls, Jackson Temple, Ralph Harrison, and Isaac Belcher served as Commissioners at different times. Notwithstanding this additional assistance given the court the cases on appeal continued to increase more rapidly than they could be disposed of. The situation had become so grievous a burden to litigants, and decisions were so long delayed, that still further relief was demanded.

District Courts of Appeal.—After several unsuccessful attempts to increase the number of Justices of the Supreme Court and to create some additional courts, an amendment to the Constitution was adopted in 1904 creating three District Courts of Appeal, each to consist of a Presiding Justice and two Associate Justices. One of these courts (First District) sits at San Francisco; one (Second District) at Los Angeles; and one (Third District) at Sacramento. The jurisdiction theretofore vested in the Supreme Court was divided between the Supreme Court and the District Courts of Appeal, each of the latter having the same jurisdiction. In the creation of the courts some novel features were introduced, in some respects unlike any other system in other states. Strictly speaking these new courts are not intermediate courts in the sense that an appeal lies from them to the Supreme Court, for such is not the case. Final jurisdiction, so far as it extends, is given to the District Courts of Appeal in the same terms as it is vested in the Supreme Court. But the losing party may petition the Supreme Court for a hearing of the case in that court, much the same as rehearings of department decisions may be granted, and a majority of that court may order it up for hearing in the Supreme Court, which will be seen to be far from the absolute right of appeal. In point of fact thus far, very few of the cases in which the petitions for hearings in the Supreme Court have been filed have been ordered up for rehearing; and it may be added, that in but a small per cent are petitions filed, the parties being content with the judgments of the Appellate Courts, as they are content in most cases with decisions of a department of the Supreme Court. There is no reason why the decision of a District Court of Appeal should not have the same weight and authority as the decision of a department of the Supreme Court, and until overruled should have the same authority as any decision of the Supreme Court.

The principal object of the provision of the Constitution for rehearings is to secure harmony in the decisions and prevent different rules of law from being established in the different Appellate Courts, i. e., to establish by decision of the Supreme Court, composed, as it is, of a larger number of Justices, a uniform rule for the government of all such cases, whether it be a construction of the Constitution or of legislative enactment, or the establishment of some rule of general law. The importance of this provision will be at once obvious even to the lay mind. Turning to some other and somewhat novel features: The Supreme Court is given power to transfer any case, over which it has exclusive jurisdiction, to any one of the District Courts of Appeal for final hearing, and, when transferred, that court has jurisdiction to determine the matter precisely as in a case of its own jurisdiction, subject, of course, to the right to petition for rehearing in the Supreme Court, as in other cases spoken of above. The Supreme Court may also transfer from one District Court of Appeal to another of these courts, or it may order transferred any such case to its own court for final hearing there.

Congestion of the Courts.—When the new courts were created the Supreme Court was two and three years behind in much of its work, and some cases had been pending even longer than three years. To relieve this congestion and to prevent its happening in the future the power was given to unload, so to speak, some of this burden on the new courts. Then, again, in districting the Appellate Courts it was not possible to make an equal distribution of the business, arising from time to time, by any geographical lines, and so the power was given to transfer cases from one Appellate Court to another. The Supreme Court is also given power to readjust the district boundaries by changing one county over into another district. But it is not likely that this power will be exercised, inasmuch as the same result may be reached by transfer of cases as above indicated. So, also, will there not likely arise any demand to amend the Constitution and change the distribution of jurisdiction, because the Supreme Court may do what it finds necessary in the way of distributing the cases which are to be heard, regardless of the jurisdiction given by the Constitution to the several courts.

I had occasion when serving as one of the Commissioners of the Supreme Court to trace the growth of litigation in that court from its organization, and found that the business had steadily outrun the possible ability of the Justices to dispose of it, although no more industrious, more conscientious or more capable body of judges could be named in any state of the Union. I found that in comparison with other State Supreme Courts, and with the United States Supreme Court, our judges were writing many more opinions, taking the average from year to year, than were the judges in any of the other states, with very few exceptions. And yet, with all the aids given them, the undecided cases at the end of the year were increasing. When the new courts were created there were in round numbers coming to the Supreme Court annually, in one way or another, by appeal or by original proceeding, from eight hundred to over one thousand cases. Not far from eight hundred called for written opinions—some of these of vast importance, requiring long and patient investigation and study, though others were comparatively simple and easily disposed of. This volume of business no doubt will be maintained—some years more, and others possibly less. Remembering that an average of fifty-five to sixty cases to be decided per annum, in which opinions must be written, is beyond the average for each judge in courts of last resort generally, it will be seen that even now our judicial machinery is not likely to enjoy many idle days, but must keep its wheels constantly moving. Indeed, I believe we shall have to simplify and improve our methods of appeal in some way and reduce the work cast upon the Supreme Court and Courts of Appeal before we shall attain the best, or even satisfactory, results. There is ample evidence, I think, that we are gaining on the old accumulated business, and that in a large number of cases we are having decisions much more promptly than under the old system, and this condition will continue to improve through the accumulated experience of the judges and the better understanding by the bar of the system itself.

Personnel of Appellate Courts.—It is not permitted by conventional rules of propriety that I should say much of the personnel of the District Courts of Appeal.

This much may be said, perhaps, without violating such rules: The Governor, in setting the new courts in motion, presumptively at least, was guided by considerations that seemed to commend themselves to the public judgment. He selected the five Commissioners who had served for several years with the Supreme Court, and the remaining Justices were chosen from citizens of high standing and long experience as judges of Superior Courts. The new courts, therefore, were launched with every promise of effective organization and of speedy and good work. How far the promise has been fulfilled is for others to judge.

At the ensuing election, in November, 1906, two of the Justices in the First District who had been appointed by the Governor, and one in the Second, and one in the Third District, were chosen by the people at the polls, and the courts were completed by the election of citizens who had served the State long and faithfully as judges of the Superior Courts.

The foregoing presents the salient provisions relating to our judicial system so far as it concerns the courts of last resort.

It is gratifying to the judges of these courts to learn, as it has from the members of the bar who have honored the courts by their presence, as well as from others, that they are giving satisfaction to our people. There were many persons, within and without the bar, who had misgivings about the proposed change, who now believe that experience thus far has fully justified the creation of these new courts. I think that the members of the Supreme Court concur in this belief. I am glad to testify that the Supreme Court is cordially coöperating to strengthen and make successful the departure from the old system.

GENERAL STATE ELECTIONS, 1849-1906.

The original Constitution provided that at the election for its submission to the people on November 13, 1849, there should be selected a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, and two Members of Congress; that the other State executive and judicial officers should be elected by the first Legislature, and thereafter chosen at general elections by the people.

ELECTION NOVEMBER 13, 1849.

At this election there were practically no partisan nominations and the candidates were independent. A mass meeting of Democrats was held at San Francisco October 25, 1849—the first political party gathering in the State—but no formal nominations were made. At the election the following candidates were voted for, and the vote was:

HISTORY OF THE SEAT OF STATE GOVERNMENT.

Action of First Constitutional Convention, 1849.—The first Constitutional Convention of California met in Colton Hall, Monterey, September 1, 1849, and on the 26th the question of the location of the seat of State government came up upon the consideration of the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Provisions of the Constitution. That committee reported the following as the first section of Article XI:

"The first session of the Legislature shall be held in the Pueblo de San José, which place shall be the permanent seat of government until removed by law; provided, however, that two thirds of all the members elected to each house of the Legislature shall concur in the passage of such a law."

Henry W. Halleck, then Secretary of State under General Riley, the Military Governor, and a member of the Convention from Monterey, offered the following as a substitute:

"The first session of the Legislature under this Constitution shall be held at Monterey, and the subsequent sessions at the permanent seat of government, which shall be the Pueblo de San José, unless otherwise directed by a majority of all the members elected to each house of the Legislature."

In the lengthy debate which followed, the delegates from Monterey represented that the amendment was offered merely as a compromise; that they were willing that the seat of government should be changed to San José after the adjournment of the first Legislature; that if the first Legislature should meet at San José in the following December, as had been proposed, it would be difficult for the people of that town to provide proper accommodations; that they were authorized by the people of Monterey to tender Colton Hall and other suitable buildings to the State for the use of the Legislature and the other State officers; that the capital should not be removed from Monterey without some notice, as that place had been, with the exception of a few years, the seat of government of the country since 1781; that it was true that the accommodations in Monterey, from circumstances entirely beyond the control of the inhabitants, for the members of the convention, had been very scanty, but that difficulty would be remedied before the meeting of the first Legislature; that the government records were then at Monterey, and that they could not be legally removed until after the new government had gone into operation and had changed the location of the capital, so that, therefore, if the first Legislature should meet at San José its session would be held at quite a distance from the place where the official records would be kept; that the question of the removal of the capital had been sprung on the people of Monterey, and that the people of San José had unexpectedly presented to the convention maps showing the advantages of their town, and that Monterey was the center of the population of the State, and was more accessible generally than San José. The delegates from San José argued that that place was the geographical center of the State; that because Monterey had been the seat of government for years was no reason why the removal should not be had; that they had been authorized by the local authorities of San José to tender to the State for the use of the Legislature a furnished building free of expense. They presented a plan of their town, and stated that the local authorities, by a resolution passed on the 8th, had unanimously resolved to permanently donate to the State a square of thirty-two acres, and valued at $60,000, provided the capital should be removed to that place at the first session of the Legislature; that until the capitol was built they would tender gratuitously for the use of the Legislature a building, which was then being erected, 70 feet long, 35 feet wide, and 21 feet high.

Rodman M. Price, of San Francisco, moved to amend the substitute by striking out "Monterey" and inserting "San Francisco." He said that he had not been authorized by his people to offer a lot of ground or a building for the accommodation of the Legislature, but he knew that suitable accommodations would be furnished, and that ground for the permanent buildings would be freely donated. Suggestions were made also to locate the seat of government at San Luis Obispo, at Benicia, at Stockton, and at Santa Barbara. The amendment of Price to insert "San Francisco" in the substitute was lost. A motion to strike out all after the word "San José" in the substitute was also lost. The substitute was then rejected—fifteen to twenty-three—and the section as reported by the committee was adopted—twenty-three to fourteen—and became a portion of the Constitution of the State.

Colton Hall, Monterey, 1849.—The building in which the first Constitutional Convention met was probably the only one in California at that time suited for the purpose. It was a handsome two-story edifice of yellow sandstone, situated on a gentle slope above the town. It was named Colton Hall, on account of its having been built by Walter Colton, the Alcalde, from the proceeds of the sale of city lots, court fines, etc. The upper story, in which the convention met, formed a single hall, about 60 feet in length by 25 in breadth. A railing ran across the middle, dividing the members from the spectators. The former were seated at four long tables. The President occupied a rostrum at the farther end, over which were suspended two American flags and a picture of Washington. The building is still standing. The Legislature passed an Act on March 25, 1903 (Stats. 1903, p. 435), which provided for a State board of three trustees with authority to lease Colton Hall from the city of Monterey for not less than ten years, and to provide for the preservation, protection, and improvement of the property. The Act carried with it an appropriation of $1,500.

San Jose the Capital, 1849.—The session of the first Legislature commenced at San José, December 15, 1849. When the session opened, the town could not accommodate the large increase in population so suddenly thrown upon it, and complaint was made by the members that all the rooms, instead of being reserved for their use, had been rented to speculators, and either held at high prices or hired to lobbyists. The rooms which had been fitted up by the people of the town for the accommodation of the two branches of the Legislature were in separate buildings at some distance apart, and were poorly adapted for legislative purposes. The State House, in which the Assembly met, was a large adobe structure, which had been built by Sansevain & Rochon on the south half of lot 6, block 1, range 1, south of the base line, which is on the east side of Market Square. It had been built for a hotel, but was the most appropriate house in the town for the accommodation of the Legislature. The Town Council had intended to lease the house for the use of the State at the rate of $4,000 per month, but upon reconsideration they decided to purchase the property. The owners of the building being unwilling to take the municipal authorities for security, several citizens executed a note for $34,000, and the deed to the property was delivered to trustees, to be conveyed to the town whenever payment for it should be made. Several years afterwards the trustees sued the Town Council for the money that had been advanced. This building was 60 feet long, 40 feet wide, two stories high, with a piazza in front. The upper story contained but one room, with a stairway leading thereto. This room was occupied by the Assembly. The lower story was divided into four rooms. The largest one, 40 by 20 feet, was afterwards fitted up for the Senate chamber. The other rooms were used by the Secretary and various committees. The building was destroyed by fire on April 29, 1853. The "San Francisco Alta" of the 30th contained this news item announcing the destruction of the building:

"FIRE AT SAN JOSE.—At a quarter past five o'clock yesterday morning, the court-house, formerly the State House, in San José, was discovered to be on fire, and in a very short time the building was entirely destroyed. The loss is about $5,000. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary. When it was discovered a box of coals was seen under the floor, and the supposed object was to rescue several prisoners who are now in the jail which adjoins the court-house. The purpose, however, was not attained; the thick adobe walls of the old jail were fireproof. The county records were all saved."

Until the Senate moved into the State House, the sittings of that body were held in the house of Isaac Branham, on the southwest corner of Market Plaza. On December 4, 1849, the authorities at Monterey authorized their delegation "to put at the disposal of the Legislature the whole premises known by the name of Colton Hall, which consists of two large rooms on the ground floor, suitable for the Senate and Assembly, one large saloon above for the Legislature, and two small back rooms for the Secretary, all with comfortable fireplaces." A proposition was also made by the citizens of San Francisco to provide accommodations if the Legislature should remove to that city. There was a strong disposition on the part of the members of the Legislature to remove to Monterey and accept the offer of Colton Hall, but the dreadful state of the roads prevented any change during that session. On the 18th the Senate appointed a committee to secure a suitable and properly furnished room for the use of that body, and on the 21st the committee reported that they had conferred with a committee of citizens of San José, and had concluded that the lower part of the State House, in the upper story of which the sessions of the Assembly were being held, was the only practicable place that could be obtained in the town. They also reported that the people of San José would have the hall prepared for occupation immediately, and that it would be assigned to their use free of charge. The Senate decided to accept the State House room, and that body moved into it on the 28th.

Removal Question, 1849-50.—The subject of the permanent location of the seat of the State government early occupied the attention of the first Legislature. The inferior accommodations which had been provided by the people of San José, as well as its then unsatisfactory geographical position, created a strong desire on the part of the members and a great number of the people for a change. At first there was a strong sympathy for the project of an immediate removal to Monterey, but as time wore on it died away, and the bills that had been introduced to provide for the removal of the capital to that town were defeated. On January 29, 1850, a resolution was adopted by the Senate, directing the Building Committee to report a bill to provide for the location of the capital at some point on the bays approachable by the largest class of steamers, and distant from any town then laid out.

On February 18th, the Town Council of Monterey tendered to the State the free use of the public buildings there for a period of five years. A proposition was made to the Legislature on December 17, 1849, by Stevenson & Parker, for the location of the seat of government at "New York of the Pacific." They proposed to erect upon one of the squares of that city, or upon such other site as might be designated, suitable buildings, of such size as the Legislature might agree upon, for the use of the Legislature, the State officers, and for the Governor as a residence, and to furnish them in a manner that would equal the furniture used in the legislative chambers at Washington. The entire cost was not to exceed $100,000, and the buildings were to be completed by January 1, 1851. The grounds and buildings were to be given to the State, and in case they ceased to be used by the State they were to revert to the original owners. The same parties, on January 17, 1850, proposed further, to have ready by May 1, 1850, suitable offices for the State officers, accommodations for the Supreme Court, and a residence for the Governor, to be used temporarily until the permanent buildings could be erected, and they offered to give security for the performance of the terms of their offer.

On January 30th, James F. Reed, a citizen of San José, proposed to donate four blocks, in all 420 by 220 varas, to be selected by the Legislature, from his addition to that town, as a site for the State buildings. In addition, he proposed to give one hundred and sixty-eight lots to be sold at auction, the money from the sale of which was to be applied to the erection of the buildings. If the Legislature concluded that two blocks would be sufficient, he then proposed to give two hundred lots, and in either event the State would get the fee-simple title to the site.

Charles White, on the same day, proposed to donate a tract of land one and one half miles square, situated about three miles distant from the then legislative hall at San José, which land was eligible for building lots and contained building stone. The State was to reserve sufficient land for public use and sell the balance. One third of the net proceeds from the sales was to go to White, and the balance to the State, to be used in the erection of the buildings.

On February 4th, John Townsend and others offered, in case the capital should be located at San José, to donate to the State about two hundred acres of land in that vicinity, from the sale of which a building fund could be realized.

Munificent Proposition of General Vallejo, 1850.—The proposition of Gen. M. G. Vallejo, however, was the most munificent. On April 3, 1850, he proposed to lay out a city upon the straits of Carquinez, upon grounds to be selected by five commissioners, three to be appointed by the Legislature and two by himself; to grant the State one hundred and fifty-six acres of land, and to donate and pay to the State within two years after the acceptance of his proposition $370,000, to be applied to the erection of public buildings. He asked that his proposition be submitted to a vote of the people at the next general election, and offered to give bonds for the performance of the terms of his contract.

The citizens of Monterey afterwards tendered, in addition to their public buildings, all the land that would be needed, together with one thousand acres for a botanical garden or model farm.

Vallejo Selected as Seat of Government, 1850-51.—The Committee on Public Buildings reported in favor of accepting the Vallejo proposition, and on April 22, 1850, an Act was passed and approved directing the Governor to submit to the people at the following general election the various propositions that had been made for the location of the capital, and the Surveyor-General was directed to examine the various localities that had been proffered, and report to the next Legislature.

At the general State election held October 7, 1850, the people voted on the propositions, with the following results: Vallejo, 7,477; San José, 1,292; San Diego, 14; Monterey, 399; Santa Cruz, 2; Reed's proposition, 651; Gilroy, 71; Eureka, 301; Stockton, 6; Sacramento, 160; San Francisco, 25; Benicia, 70; Nevada, 82; Downieville, 150; Hamilton, 10; Yuba City, 14; scattering, 5.

At the opening of the second legislative session, in 1851, General Vallejo, and the parties interested with him in obtaining a removal of the seat of government from San José to Vallejo, appeared at the former place and exerted themselves to consummate the change. They succeeded in turning a strong current in favor of their project, but the scheme had also an able and energetic opposition. On January 14, 1851, Vallejo presented a communication to the Senate, in which he stated he was prepared to give bonds, with ample security, for the fulfillment of the proposition which he had submitted to the preceding Legislature. On the 16th, the Surveyor-General submitted a report upon the advantages and disadvantages of the different localities proposed for the establishment of the capital, and the report favored a removal to Vallejo. The next day the majority of the Senate Committee on Public Buildings reported in favor of accepting Vallejo's proposition, but George B. Tingley, from the same committee, submitted a minority report on the 20th, in which he vigorously opposed the change and favored San José for the seat of government. The majority of the committee reported a bill in accordance with their views, and it was passed by the Senate on the 23d by a vote of eleven to two.

The next day Tingley filed a written protest against the passage of the bill, upon the grounds that Vallejo could and would pay the $370,000 in State scrip, which was then worth but fifty cents on the dollar, and that the change of the capital would be injurious to the State.

An effort was made in the House to defeat the bill. The citizens of San José sent a communication to the Assembly offering, if the capital should be retained at that city, to donate to the State $406,000 worth of land, and to furnish accommodations for the Legislature and State officers free of charge until such time as the State should become able to pay rent. On February 1st the removal bill came up for discussion in the House. The chamber was crowded with interested spectators. After a warm debate, it was passed by a vote of twenty-six to eight. This Act provided that after the close of that session Vallejo should be the permanent seat of government, provided General Vallejo should submit a satisfactory bond, to be approved by the Legislature and Governor, conditioned that he would faithfully carry out the terms of his offer; that he would provide for the space of three years a State House and other offices of state equal to or better than those then occupied and without expense to the State; and that in case he refused or failed to perform the conditions of his proposition, the law would become void. The Governor approved the bill on the 4th, and on the same day Vallejo submitted his bond, which was approved after a great deal of opposition and discussion.

CAPITOL AT VALLEJO—1852-1853.

Vallejo the Capital, 1851.—Governor McDougal caused the governmental archives to be removed from San José to Vallejo in June, 1851. General Vallejo was slow in performing his part of the contract, and in September it was found that the State House and offices were not sufficiently completed to preserve the public records or to accommodate the public business, and the Governor ordered a removal back to San José, which was accordingly done. As the time approached for the assembling of the Legislature the question as to where it should meet was much discussed. It was held by some that Vallejo was the seat of government, and that the Legislature would have to meet there at all events, while others claimed that inasmuch as General Vallejo had not fulfilled the terms of his proposition the Removal Act was void, and that San José was still the capital. On December 30, 1851, a meeting of members elect to the Legislature was held in San Francisco for the purpose of consulting as to the proper place for holding the session. Twelve Senators and thirty Assemblymen were present, and after a debate and the reception of the opinion of Attorney-General McDougall that Vallejo was by law the seat of government, it was decided to meet at that place. Accordingly, on January 5, 1852, the third session of the Legislature began at Vallejo. The building provided was of wood. It was afterwards destroyed by fire. When the Legislature met the State House was entirely unfurnished, and the rostrums for the presiding officers had not been built. So uncertain had it been whether the Legislature would meet there that the inhabitants of that city were ill prepared to accommodate the increase in the population. Rooms and beds were scarce and upwards of one hundred persons were forced to seek quarters on board the steamer Empire, on which they had come up. Chairs were so scarce in the town that the members were seated in their halls on temporary benches made of boards placed on stools and nail kegs. It was not until the 8th that a sufficient number of chairs arrived to comfortably seat them. The legislators soon began to complain that their wardrobes were becoming soiled, and that there was not even a washerwoman in town to keep them in clean collars. To add to the discomfort, food of all kinds became amusingly scarce. Work, however, was prosecuted with energy in the State House, but it was some time before it was in anything like order. A strong disposition was manifested for a removal of the Legislature to some other city that could afford superior accommodations.

Removal Question, 1852.—On December 29, 1851, the Court of Sessions of Sacramento County passed a resolution tendering to the Legislature the newly completed court-house at Sacramento in which to hold the sessions, and on that evening a mass meeting of the citizens of that city was held and the action of the court was indorsed, and as an additional inducement, they proposed to tender to the State officers and members of the Legislature a grand complimentary ball on the evening of January 13, 1852. The Common Council of San Francisco, on January 5th, invited the Legislature to meet in their city. The people of San José offered, as an inducement to hold the session there, to board the members at the rate of $14 per week, and the citizens of Benicia tendered the free use of suitable buildings at that place. On the first day of the session protests were presented to each house against meeting at Vallejo, upon the ground that General Vallejo had not complied with the terms of his contract; that, therefore, the law designating his city as the seat of government was void, and that if the session were held there the General would insist that it amounted to an acceptance, on the part of the State, of Vallejo as the capital. On the 7th, Governor McDougal transmitted to the Senate a written protest against the Legislature meeting at Vallejo, based substantially on the same grounds. The feeling in favor of a removal grew stronger each day, and on the 10th the people of Vallejo memorialized the Legislature to allow them another week to prepare suitable accommodations, but their petition was laid on the table.

Sacramento the Capital, 1852.—On January 9, 1852, the Assembly adopted a joint resolution for a removal to Sacramento, and to meet in that city on the 13th. The next day the matter came up in the Senate and was defeated by a tie vote, but on the 12th both houses adjourned, to meet at Sacramento on the 16th. The steamer Empire left Vallejo for Sacramento, with the Legislature, at three o'clock on the afternoon of the 13th, and reached the latter city the next day. A dense crowd of people was at the landing awaiting her arrival, and she was received with the firing of cannon and other manifestations of appreciation. The work of fitting up the Sacramento court-house was immediately commenced, and by noon on the 16th everything was arranged, and the two houses met in it. The grand ball was given on that evening by the citizens of Sacramento, who charged themselves $20 apiece for the tickets. A joint resolution was adopted on the 16th authorizing the Governor to have the State archives removed from San José to Sacramento, to remain during the session, and requiring the Governor and the executive State officers to reside in Sacramento during the session. The State officers prepared to obey the order, when an injunction was served upon them, issued upon the petition of J. D. Hoppe, and other citizens of San José, who claimed that that city was the true seat of government. The restraining order was dissolved, however, and a few days afterwards the records were boxed up and shipped to the new capital, where they arrived on the 21st.

On April 30, 1852, an Act was passed recognizing Vallejo as the permanent seat of government, and directing the Governor to remove the archives and State offices from Sacramento to that city without unnecessary delay upon the adjournment of the Legislature. Early in the session a joint committee was appointed to confer with General Vallejo to ascertain if he intended to carry out the terms of his agreement, and on January 24th that gentleman addressed a letter to the committee stating that since he had made the proposition he had become so embarrassed as to be unable to perform his obligations, and asked that his bond be canceled. On March 7th the City of Sacramento was inundated by high water, and there was for a time a disposition to remove the Legislature to San Francisco.

FIRST CAPITOL AT SACRAMENTO—1852-1854.

General Vallejo Fails to Fulfill His Contract—Benicia the Capital, 1853.—As in the preceding year, as the time for the meeting of the Legislature of 1853 approached, the question as to where the session should be held was agitated. General Vallejo had become so embarrassed as not to be able to perform the conditions of his proposition, and the accommodations at the “permanent seat of government” were but little better than those which had been afforded at that place to the Legislature of 1852. The disposition was strong to have the Legislature remove to some other city immediately after it was organized. The citizens of Benicia and Sacramento held out flattering inducements for a change to their cities respectively, with the odds largely in favor of the former place, where it was urged there would be no danger of a flood, such as had rendered Sacramento so unpleasant in 1852. Immediately on the organization of the Legislature, resolutions were introduced to adjourn the session to San José, to Benicia, and to Sacramento, but they failed. The removal question, however, soon absorbed everything else, and the issue was made between Vallejo and Benicia. The citizens of the latter place agreed to donate the free use of their new city hall to the Legislature, to provide suitable offices for the State officials, and to pay the expenses of the removal, if the Legislature would meet in their city.

On February 4, 1853, the Assembly adopted a resolution to adjourn to meet at Benicia on the 11th. On the same day the Senate concurred, and Vallejo again lost the Legislature. The same day an Act was passed, the preamble of which recited that by the law which located the capital at Vallejo it was provided that if General Vallejo failed or refused to comply with the terms of his proposition, in whole or in part, the Act should become void; and that General Vallejo had petitioned the Legislature to be released from the performance of his bond given under that Act, and had expressed his inability to comply with its conditions. It was therefore provided that the permanent seat of government should, on and after February 5, 1853, be established at Benicia, if Vallejo should fail or refuse to comply with the conditions of his bond, or should be released from it. The Act also provided that he should be released upon condition of his waiving all claims for relief or damages against the State, founded upon the location of the capital at or its removal from Vallejo. On the 14th General Vallejo executed the release. It was approved by the State authorities, and on the 24th the Mayor of Benicia executed a deed to the State for the city hall property, conditioned that in case the seat of government should be thereafter removed from that city the property should revert to the municipality. On May 18th another Act was passed declaring Benicia the permanent seat of government in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, and it was declared to be unlawful for any court or judge to grant a writ of mandamus or other order directed against the State officers to compel them to remove the State archives or offices from Benicia to any other point in the State. The building in which the Legislature met at Benicia was of brick. It covered about the same surface area as the present court-house at Sacramento, and was two stories in height. The rear end of the lower story constituted the Senate chamber, which was approached by a hallway from the main entrance. There were four large rooms in the building on that floor, opening into the hallway between the Senate chamber and the entrance. In the upper story the Assembly chamber occupied the rear part, and the front of the building was divided into two rooms. The building is still standing, and is used as a town hall and theater.

Sacramento Again the Capital, 1854.—As early as October, 1853, a movement was set on foot to remove the permanent seat of government from Benicia to Sacramento, and soon after the organization of the Legislature of 1854 the question of removal was second in importance to the election of United States Senator. It was argued that the conveniences to the members at Sacramento would be greater, the accommodations for State officers would be more ample, and greater security would be provided for the public records; and there was a strong disposition to make the change. Governor Bigler, in his annual message of January 4, 1854, said:

"Although deeply impressed with the importance, as well as the necessity, of economizing in every department of the State government, I feel it incumbent upon me to direct your attention to the insecure condition of the public archives. The entire public records, as well as the State Library, now numbering about four thousand volumes, are kept in fragile frame buildings, without fire-proof vaults or safes. The public records are now invaluable, and if destroyed, could not be replaced, and their loss would involve the State and individuals in serious difficulties. In the other States of the Confederacy, the officers of State are provided with substantial brick or stone buildings, and the public records rendered entirely secure by being deposited in fire-proof vaults or safes, provided for that purpose. In this truly important matter, we are admonished of the necessity of increased safeguards by the many and terrible conflagrations which have occurred during the past year. I trust, therefore, that you will, without delay, adopt such measures as you may deem necessary to render entirely secure the public archives in the several offices, and also the State Library."

On January 6th the Governor sent a special message to the Legislature, transmitting a communication from the Mayor and Common Council of Sacramento, offering if the capital should be removed to that city, to grant to the State government the free use of the court-house and other suitable rooms, for the accommodation of the State officers, together with fire-proof vaults for the security of the public moneys and records; to remove the members of the Legislature and the State officers and the government furniture and archives, free of charge, from Benicia; and to grant to the State, for a building lot for the capitol, the public square between I and J and Ninth and Tenth streets. The court-house tendered for the use of the Legislature was the same building in which the session of 1852 had been held. It was of brick, 60 by 80 feet in dimensions, and two stories high. The people of Benicia offered the free use of the buildings then occupied for State purposes, for as long a time as they might be desired. The propositions were referred to special committees, to whom, also, were referred the various resolutions and bills that had been offered on the subject of the capital removal.

Early in the session joint and concurrent resolutions were offered to remove the Legislature to Sacramento, but they failed, and it looked very much as if the removal proposition would be defeated. Finally, on February 9th, A. P. Catlin introduced a bill in the Senate to fix the permanent seat of government at Sacramento. In the Assembly there was a clear majority in favor of the removal, but in the Senate Benicia had the advantage. Catlin, however, succeeded in carrying the bill through the Senate. The measure passed that body on the 18th by a vote of thirteen to eleven. The Senate adjourned, however, without assenting to the title of the bill, and on the 20th that question came up. After a number of amendments had been voted down the title was approved. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill had been passed was then made, and the remainder of the day was consumed in voting on motions for delay, when the whole matter went over until the next day by the withdrawal of enough members to leave no quorum. On the 21st a motion to indefinitely postpone the motion to reconsider was carried. The bill went to the Assembly on that day, and a motion to reject it was defeated by a vote of thirty-two to thirty-five. On the 23d the bill was referred to a committee. It was favorably reported on the next day, and came up on its passage. Various amendments were defeated, and the bill was passed as it had come originally from the Senate, by a vote of thirty-nine to thirty-five. On the 25th a motion to reconsider was defeated, and on that day it met with the approval of Governor Bigler. The Act repealed all former Acts in relation to the location of the capital, and provided that from and after one day after its passage the seat of government should be located permanently at Sacramento. A resolution to adjourn to the new capital was immediately passed. On the 28th, the Governor and the other State officers arrived at Sacramento, where they were received with numerous demonstrations of rejoicing. The Sutter Rifles paraded the streets, acting as an escort to the Governor. The procession, after marching through the principal streets, halted in front of the Orleans Hotel. Here Alderman Spaulding delivered an address of welcome to the State officers and members of the Legislature. Speeches were also made by Governor Bigler, Secretary of State J. W. Denver, Mayor Hardenburg, J. W. Coffroth, and others. On March 1st the Legislature again met in the Sacramento court-house.

Litigation, 1854.—On March 24, 1854, an Act was passed requiring the sessions of the Supreme Court, which were then being held in San Francisco, to be held at the seat of government; and on the 27th Justices Heydenfeldt and Wells decided, Chief Justice Murray dissenting, that San José was the legal capital, and that all the Acts in relation to removal which had been passed were unconstitutional. An order was entered by the court directing the transfer of the judicial archives to San José, and ordering the Sheriff of Santa Clara County to provide suitable accommodations. On the 30th the change was made.

After the election in 1854 the question of the removal of the capital was again discussed, and so confident were the people of San José that the seat of government would be removed to that city, in view of the favorable ruling of the Supreme Court, that extensive preparations were made there for the accommodation of the State officers and the Legislature. On October 21st a writ of mandate was issued by Judge C. P. Hester, of the Third District Court, at the instance of Thomas L. Vermeule and others, directing the State officers to show cause why they should not forthwith remove their offices and papers to San José. The Attorney-General answered on the 28th, and on the hearing, the Judge made an order directing that the removal be made. The matter was carried to the Supreme Court, and on December 28th, Justices Murray and Bryan (who had been appointed, vice Wells, deceased) filed opinions reversing the judgment of Judge Hester, and an order was made directing the Clerk of the Supreme Court to remove the records of that court to Sacramento, and ordering the Sheriff of that county to provide suitable accommodations for the court. The court then adjourned to meet at Sacramento on the first Monday of February, 1855. Their decision was that Sacramento was the legal State capital. Justice Heydenfeldt dissented, and held that as the Act to remove the capital to Sacramento had not been passed by a two-thirds vote in the Legislature, it was unconstitutional. He also held that the Act to remove to Vallejo was unconstitutional, for the reason that it appeared on its face that in its passage the Legislature had been prompted by a consideration of the amount of money which General Vallejo had agreed to pay, that that had amounted to a sale of the seat of government, and that it had not been the deliberate judgment of the Legislature. He therefore concluded that San José was the legal capital.

First Two Capitol Buildings at Sacramento.—The first court-house that was erected at Seventh and I streets, in Sacramento City, and in which the sessions of 1852 and 1854 were held, was commenced in June, 1850, and completed December 24, 1851. It was destroyed in the great fire of July 13, 1854, which consumed a large portion of the business part of the city. On the 14th the "Democratic State Journal" gave the following as one of the incidents connected with the destruction of the court-house:

"PATRIOTIC.—When the fire threatened the court-house with destruction, the Governor (Bigler), who was present, and who had been working from the commencement of the fire wherever Sacramento most needed a soldier, asked those present to assist him in saving the furniture. To this many objected, on the ground that private parties, who could not suffer the loss as well as the county, needed their services. A full-length portrait of Washington was standing against the southern wall, and, pointing to it, the Governor said, 'See, there is the portrait of the father of your country; will you permit it to be destroyed?' when a general rush was made for the portrait, and it was saved." The portrait now hangs in the Senate chamber.

Immediately after the fire a contract was entered into between Joseph Nougues and the county officers for the erection of the present court-house. As originally arranged, the building answered the following description: Extreme height, 61 feet; dimensions, 80 by 120 feet; with a portico supported by ten pillars, 3 feet 6 inches in diameter by 31 feet 6 inches in height. The ground floor was devoted to a county prison. On the same floor were two separate offices containing fire-proof vaults, and occupied by the State Controller and State Treasurer. The second floor was devoted to a Senate chamber, 57 by 30 feet, and an Assembly room, 72 feet 8 inches by 41 feet 4 inches, together with nine rooms for clerks and officers of the Legislature. The style of architecture is Ionic. The original contract price was $100,600, and the subsequent contracts made the total cost of the building to the county $240,000. The corner-stone was laid September 27, 1854, with Masonic honors, and the brick work was completed November 9th following. The building was finished January 1, 1855. It was rented to the State for capitol purposes at an annual rental of $12,000, and was used for that purpose from 1855 until the completion of the present capitol.

Contemplated Capitol Building at Sacramento, 1856.—On April 18, 1856, the Legislature passed a law providing for the construction of a capitol building on the public square between I and J and Ninth and Tenth streets in the city of Sacramento. By the act Controller Whitman, Secretary of State Douglass, and G. Griswold were appointed a Board of Capitol Commissioners, with power to make contracts and superintend the erection of the building. The proposed capitol was to be ready for occupation on or before January 1, 1858, and the cost was limited to $300,000. The law also authorized the issuance of thirty-year bonds to that amount to pay the expenses of construction. The Board organized a few days after the passage of the Act, and immediately advertised for plans. On August 13, 1856, it adopted the plans submitted by Reuben Clark. The building contemplated in these plans was to be in the form of a Greek cross, of the Corinthian style, with a rotunda and dome. It was to be 212 feet long and 145 feet wide, and to have a cellar beneath for the reception of fuel and rubbish. Above the cellar was to be the basement story, raised about five feet above the grade of the lot. The height of this story was to be 14 feet, and it was to contain the apartments of the executive and judicial officers. The second story was to be 36 feet in height, and in it were to be located a circular Senate chamber, 64½ by 50 feet, and an Assembly hall, in the form of a half square, 84 by 52½ feet. The library was also to be on this floor, and above it were to be a number of committee rooms. The height of the dome from the ground line was to be 132 feet, and the rotunda was to be 40 feet in diameter and 118 feet in height. It was designed that up to the first floor the walls should be of granite, and above that of brick, coated on the outside with mastic. On September 1st the Board advertised for proposals for erecting the building, and on November 1st the bids—sixteen in number—were opened, and the contract was awarded to Joseph Nougues for $200,000. The highest bid was $290,000. On December 2d the contractor staked off the ground for the building, and on the 4th the earth was broken for its foundation. The bill provided that the contractor should be paid in bonds as the work progressed, but on the 15th the State officers refused to issue the bonds for the work that had been done, on the strength of a decision which had been rendered by the Supreme Court, declaring in effect that the indebtedness created by the Act, being in excess of the amount permitted by the Constitution, was void. The contractor instituted an action of mandamus to compel the issuance of the bonds, but the Supreme Court decided adversely to him, and the work was stopped and never resumed. On April 11, 1859, the Legislature allowed the claim of Nougues, on account of labor and material furnished under this contract, for the sum of $5,388.05.

Failure of Capitol Building Bill, 1858.—The want of a suitable State capitol was felt more as the public business increased in volume. Governor Johnson in his annual message of 1858, in referring to that subject, said:

"After the frequent changes we have witnessed of the seat of government, at length a degree of permanency has been given to it which fully justifies speedy action being taken for the erection of public buildings suitable for the various departments of government. Independent of that laudable pride which, in the present condition of public affairs, should impel such action—in a pecuniary sense it would be serviceable to the public good. The amount of rents now paid by the State government fully equals the interest on $300,000, at seven per cent per annum, the same rate which is to be paid on our public debt. That sum, or even less, will suffice to erect a suitable building for the necessary purposes of the State, and I recommend the passage of a law, at this session, making provision for the erection of such a building."

The Governor further recommended the erection of a first-class building, and the appropriation of $100,000 a year for three years, for the purpose of paying for its construction. On February 3, 1858, R. D. Ferguson offered a resolution in the Assembly for the appointment of a joint committee to confer with the Supervisors of Sacramento County and ascertain on what terms the county would dispose of the court-house, then occupied as the capitol. The resolution was adopted by both houses, and on the next day the committee was appointed. The Supervisors offered to dispose of the court-house for $125,000, and on February 27th W. I. Ferguson introduced a bill in the Senate to provide for the purchase of that building by the State at the price named.

The bill was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings, and on March 13th a majority of the committee recommended its passage. The minority submitted a dissenting report on the 17th, based on the following reasons: That there had been donated to the State a square of land in Sacramento, valued at about $40,000, which would revert to the city if not used; that the State had, at a cost of $3,000, procured plans of a magnificent capitol of suitable size; that a branch prison would shortly be established, and the granite needed for the erection of a capitol could then be taken out and prepared by the prisoners; that the brick needed could also be manufactured at a small cost by the same labor; that a capitol could be so erected at a cost of not over $200,000; that the court-house was not fitted for the purposes of a capitol, as it had been hastily erected for another purpose, and had become prematurely old and dilapidated; and that to fit it up and make it answer for a capitol would incur an expense much larger than to erect a new building. They therefore recommended the indefinite postponement of the bill. The Senate had the matter under consideration until toward the end of the session, when it was lost.

On March 13, 1858, Nougues, the contractor to build the capitol under the Act of 1856, sent a communication to the Legislature, proposing, for $125,000, to erect upon the public square which had been donated to the State by the City of Sacramento, a building in all respects according to the plans of the court-house, except that instead of having a prison in the basement, it should be fitted up for public offices. He proposed to have the building ready for occupancy by December 1st following. This offer met the same fate as the court-house purchasing bill.

Proposed Removal to Oakland, 1858-59.—Soon after the meeting of the Legislature of 1858, a movement was inaugurated to remove the seat of government from Sacramento to Oakland. On March 23d a memorial was read in the Senate, from the Mayor, Council, and citizens of the latter city, asking for the change. S. B. Bell offered a resolution to appoint a joint committee to visit Oakland with a view to ascertaining its advantages as a site for the capital, and to receive such proposals to donate land, buildings, etc., as the people of that city might be disposed to make. A like memorial was presented to the Assembly, and was referred to a select committee, which on the 27th reported a resolution to appoint a similar committee to the one proposed in the Senate. This resolution was adopted by both houses and the committee was raised. The three Assemblymen on the joint committee reported on April 6th that the citizens of Oakland proposed to furnish at a nominal rental suitable buildings for the use of the State until a capitol should be erected; that they proposed to donate twenty acres within the city limits as a site for the contemplated public buildings; and that the location was better than at Sacramento. They strongly recommended the removal, and presented a bill to the House to provide for the permanent location of the capital at Oakland. The two Senators concurred in the report, except that they made no recommendation in regard to a removal. The bill to remove to Oakland was taken up in the Assembly on the 21st and defeated by a vote of forty-four to fifteen.

In the Assembly, on March 2, 1859, the Committee on Public Buildings, acting in accordance with the direction of that body, reported a bill to provide for the construction of a State capitol in Sacramento. The bill contemplated the erection of a building in accordance with the plans which had been prepared under the Act of 1856, at a cost of not over $120,000. The consideration of this was made the special order for the 14th, at which time W. P. Rodgers offered a substitute, to authorize the Common Council of Oakland to levy a special tax of $10 on each $100 worth of real estate in that city, and the Supervisors of Alameda County to levy a tax of 50 cents on the $100 of real estate in that county, to create a fund for building a capitol at Oakland; and to authorize the Governor to accept for the State a donation of ten acres of land in that city as a site for the building, and to issue his proclamation for the removal of the seat of government to Oakland. A resolution was adopted by the House, by a vote of thirty-two to thirty, raising a committee of five to visit Oakland and inquire into the expediency of locating the seat of government there. On the 22d the bills again came up, when Henry Hancock introduced a bill to appropriate $200,000 for the purpose of commencing the erection of a capitol at Oakland. On the same day four of the visiting committee submitted a report warmly recommending the removal, while the remaining members expressed the view that it would be impolitic to leave Sacramento. A week later the Rodgers bill was defeated by a vote of twenty-eight to thirty, and the Sacramento bill was refused engrossment by a vote of fifteen to forty-one. The Hancock bill was laid on the table on April 9th.

Removal Question, 1860.—Governor Weller, in his annual message of 1860, recommended the appropriation of $100,000 for the purpose of erecting a capitol at Sacramento, and he argued that it would be a move in the direction of economy, as the State was then paying $8,000 per annum rental for a building—an amount equal to eight per cent per annum on the estimated cost of the structure which had been contemplated by the Act of 1856. Since the adjournment of the Legislature of 1859 the question of removal of the seat of government from Sacramento had been agitated to a considerable extent in San Francisco and Oakland, and it was anticipated that an effort to remove to one of those cities would be strongly pressed in the session of 1860. On January 20th of that year, R. A. Redman introduced a bill in the Senate to remove the seat of government to Oakland in July following, provided that city would, within sixty days after the passage of the Act, execute a deed to the State for a quantity of land, not less than ten acres in extent and suitably located in that city, for the State buildings. The bill was referred to a select committee, but it never came up.

On the 24th a bill was introduced in the Assembly by W. B. Maxson, to locate the capital at San Francisco after July 8th. It was referred to the same committee, and met with the fate of the Redman bill. On the 27th the Senate adopted a resolution to appoint a joint committee to take into consideration the permanent location and removal, if deemed expedient, of the capital, and on February 7th the House concurred in the action of the Senate. The committee visited San Francisco, San José, and Oakland, and on March 8th submitted their report. They had received from the Supervisors of San Francisco the offer of a donation of any public square, except Portsmouth, in that city as a location for the building; and they also had proposed to issue city bonds to the amount of $150,000 for the purpose of raising money to erect the building, with the understanding that the State should own the land and building so long as it should be used for the purposes indicated, but in case the capital should be removed from San Francisco the property should revert to the city. As an additional inducement for the location of the capital at San Francisco, Beideman & Page proposed to convey to the State, as a site for the capitol, four blocks of land, and to improve the streets around them. The citizens of Oakland renewed the offer that had been made by them the year before. The authorities and citizens of San José claimed that the removal of the capital from that city had been unconstitutional, and that, therefore, it should be relocated there. The authorities of Sacramento tendered the free use of the then State House for as long a time as the State should see fit to occupy it. Four of the committee recommended that it was inexpedient to remove from Sacramento, and that an appropriation should be made for the immediate construction of a State House in that city. On March 20th, three other members of the committee submitted a lengthy report recommending the removal of the seat of government to San Francisco at the close of the then session, and they presented a bill to that end.

Bill for Construction of New Capitol, 1860.—On January 23, 1860, S. A. Merritt introduced a bill in the Senate to provide for the construction of a capitol in Sacramento, and on March 12th the majority of the committee to whom it had been referred recommended its passage, with sundry amendments. On the 15th, the minority of the committee recommended its indefinite postponement for various reasons. The bill came up in the Senate for discussion on the 21st, and was amended to increase the appropriation for the entire work to half a million dollars; to provide for the removal of the Supreme Court to San Francisco; and to authorize the city authorities of Sacramento to condemn for a site for the capitol the four blocks of land between L and N, Tenth and Twelfth streets, which land it was agreed should be purchased by the city and donated to the State. The bill passed the Senate on the 23d by a vote of twenty-six to seven. On February 20th, John Conness introduced a bill in the Assembly to build a capitol at Sacramento. This bill was almost a duplicate of the Merritt bill. It was favorably reported by the majority of the committee to which it had been referred on March 14th; and on the same day an adverse minority report was submitted, because the title to the land to be donated for the location of the capitol would be imperfect, because the land would be insufficient in quantity, and because the financial condition of the State did not warrant the appropriation of the sum of money contemplated in the bill. After a discussion lasting several days, the Assembly, on the 24th, passed a substitute for the Conness bill by a vote of forty-six to twenty-four. This bill differed from the Merritt bill in that it did not provide for the removal of the Supreme Court to San Francisco. The substitute bill was passed by the Senate on the 26th, and on the next day a motion to reconsider was lost by a vote of five to twenty-five. On the 29th, Governor Downey approved the bill.

The law provided for the appointment of a commission, consisting of the Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, A. C. Monson, and Alfred Redington, whose duty it was to contract for and superintend the erection of the capitol upon the tract of land between L and N, Tenth and Twelfth streets, in Sacramento. After condemning the land mentioned, the commission was directed to adopt plans for the building, to appoint a supervising architect, and to make contracts for its construction. The entire cost of the building was limited to $500,000, and the City of Sacramento was to pay for the land.

Work Commenced on New Capitol, 1860.—On April 4, 1860, the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of Sacramento deeded to the State the blocks of land mentioned in the law, and an ordinance was passed on that day vacating the streets and alleys within the limits named. On the 6th the commissioners advertised for plans for the contemplated building, and on May 19th the seven plans which had been submitted were opened and examined, but it was not until July 14th that the Board determined to accept the one submitted by M. F. Butler. In that same month Reuben Clark was appointed Superintending Architect. On June 2d proceedings were commenced in the Sixth District Court to condemn the lands selected as the site for the building. The commissioners appointed by the court to estimate the value of the property sought to be condemned reported, on July 5th, that the compensation to the owners should be $65,517. A tax was levied upon and collected from the citizens of Sacramento to pay that amount. On September 3d the Capitol Commissioners opened the proposals for the construction of the foundation and the erection of the basement story walls of the building. Seven bids were submitted, the highest being $130,000, and the lowest—that of Michael Fennell—$80,000. The contract was awarded to Fennell, and was signed on the 20th.

Progress of Work on New Capitol, 1860-63.—It was agreed in the contract that work should be commenced before October 1, 1860, and finished within ten months. Ground was broken in excavating for the foundation on September 24th, and that work was completed on October 25th, when the laying of concrete was commenced. On April 1, 1861, Fennell withdrew from the further prosecution of the work. The Legislature on May 20, 1861, authorized the commissioners to make an amicable settlement with him and to cancel his contract, provided he would file a release of all claims against the State. The law provided that the matter should then be arbitrated, and the Commissioners were directed to make a new contract for the completion of the building to the extent contemplated in the Fennell contract, and the sum of $50,000 was appropriated to carry on the work. Some time was spent in letting the second contract, and until the middle of August, 1861, little or nothing was accomplished. On May 15, 1861, the corner-stone was laid with imposing Masonic ceremonies in the presence of a large concourse of people. On July 29th the contract to complete the work laid out was let to G. W. Blake and P. Edward Conner, and they continued to work until January 1, 1862, when they quit, having suffered severe losses in the great flood. On April 19, 1862, the Legislature passed an Act directing the Commissioners to cancel this contract also, and the contractors were awarded $55,570.26 to pay them for the labor and materials they had furnished, and for damages they had sustained by the flood. The same law provided for a modification of the plans, so that the total cost of the building should not be, when added to the amount which had then been expended, over $500,000, and it was provided that work should be continued by day's labor until the unexpended appropriation should be disposed of.

Session of Legislature in San Francisco, 1862.—The Thirteenth Session of the Legislature met at Sacramento, January 6, 1862. The city had been overtaken with a disastrous flood on December 9, 1861, and was not particularly inviting when the Legislature met there a month later. This calamity opened again the subject of removal of the State capital to some other point in the State, and it was discussed to a considerable extent in the newspapers. On the 10th of January, 1862, the day on which Governor Stanford was inaugurated, another flood visited the city, and on the next day the Senate, by a vote of twenty to thirteen, adopted a concurrent resolution to adjourn the meeting of the Legislature to San Francisco for the remainder of the session. The Assembly refused to concur by a vote of thirty-six to forty. However, on the 22d, a resolution to adjourn to San Francisco passed both houses, and on the 24th the Legislature met in the Exchange Building, on Battery street, in that city. Unsuccessful efforts were subsequently made to remove the offices of the State officers to San Francisco.

Progress of Work on New Capitol, 1863-66.—On March 27, 1863, an Act was passed levying an annual ad valorem tax of 5 cents on the $100 of property in the State to create a Special Capitol Fund, and the Act was to remain in force until the building should be finished and the grounds graded and fenced. On April 20th, another Act was passed directing the Commissioners to let contracts for the purchase of materials and to employ labor by the day.

Governor Stanford, in his annual message of December 9, 1863, reported that work on the State Capitol had been renewed in June, 1863, and had been prosecuted with vigor under the direction of the Commissioners, who had been compelled to proceed cautiously, and they had been actuated by a desire to keep within, rather than go beyond, the limits of the legislative appropriations. The Governor said:

"This method of constructing a State capitol will be a long and tedious one, and, at best, the yearly advance it will make will not keep pace with the people's expectations. The building should be finished as early as possible, and the means provided to insure that result. In a young state like our own, poor in comparison to what its future promises, the conviction has become strong in my mind that coming generations should share with the present in the erection of any great and permanent public building. And while thus calling upon the future for aid an edifice should be constructed that will be satisfactory to the grandeur of the coming time. In all new countries the first generation has much to overcome, which inevitably results largely to the benefit of those that follow after: and the older a growing State becomes, the more ability it has to bear burdens that have been lightened by the sacrifice of its earlier years.

"The State capitol of California, that is to endure for generations, should be a structure that the future will be proud of, and surrounded by grounds that should extend into the dimensions of an ample park. Such grounds can now be had at a comparatively nominal sum, and the peculiar salubrity of our climate would in a few years surround the edifice with a beauty and luxuriousness that no other capital in the country could boast.

"I would therefore recommend that, consulting the future, with a due consideration for the present, a law should be passed, and submitted to the people of the State, providing for the issuance of bonds for State capitol purposes, sufficient to complete the work in the manner proposed."

On December 16, 1863, A. C. Henry introduced in the Senate a bill to repeal the Act providing a special fund for the construction of the capitol at Sacramento, but the bill was never reported back from the Committee on Public Buildings, to which it was referred. On January 5, 1864, a bill for the completion of the capitol was introduced in the Assembly by Frederick Lux. The bill contemplated the issuance of State bonds to the amount of $1,000,000, payable in 1884, the proceeds to be expended for the immediate completion of the building. This bill was reported back with amendments on the 15th, and, after being lengthily debated, was indefinitely postponed on March 16th, by a vote of thirty-nine to twenty-three. On February 8, 1864, a bill was introduced in the Assembly by Seth Martin to provide a special fund for the construction of the capitol, and to submit the same to a vote of the people, but on March 18th it was indefinitely postponed, on motion of its author. The session of the Legislature closed without any action upon the subject of the capitol.

On February 10, 1866, Thomas Hardy offered a resolution in the Senate to instruct the Committee on Public Buildings to report upon the advisability and economy of donating the capitol and whatever other buildings in Sacramento the State had any interest in, to that city, and of removing the capital to some other locality. The resolution was set for April 7th—beyond the constitutional period for the session of the Legislature—by a vote of twenty-two to fourteen. On March 2d, an Act was approved to provide for the speedy completion of the capitol. It imposed an annual ad valorem tax of 5 cents on the $100 to raise a fund for that purpose, and the law was to remain in force until the Governor should declare by proclamation that the building was finished.

The State Capitol Commissioners reported, under date of November 1, 1867, that during the years 1863, 1864, and 1865, there had been levied an annual tax of 5 cents on the $100 to create a special fund for the construction of the capitol; that in 1866 and 1867 the tax had been increased to 10 cents; that the amounts derived from this taxation had been: In 1863, $62,000; 1864, $69,641.96; 1865, $72,193.96; 1866, $151,378.10; 1867 (estimated), $155,000. That the expenditures had been: In 1863, $59,731.18; 1864, $59,515.14; 1865, $72,704.78; 1866, $118,952.30; 1867, $175,184.90. That in October, 1866, attention had been attracted to some cracks in the northern wall, alleged to have been caused by the settling of the building, but that defect had been remedied. That on January 1, 1866, G. P. Cummings had been appointed architect in place of Reuben Clark, who had become sick, and who died subsequently on July 4, 1866. And that on January 18, 1867, the Board had adopted a resolution discontinuing the use of granite for the exterior walls, above the medallion course at the top of the basement story, and had determined to use hard-burned brick, with ornaments of cast-iron—the brick to be covered with a substantial coat of mastic, and painted. Later, A. A. Bennett succeeded Cummings as architect.

On January 10, 1868, Francis Giltner offered a resolution in the Assembly to instruct the Committee on Public Buildings to examine the condition of the capitol, its manner of construction, the expenditure, and the probable cost for its completion, the probable cost to secure it against overflow from the Sacramento and American rivers, and the cost of grading the grounds, and of ventilation and lighting. An amendment, by A. Comte, Jr., was adopted—forty-two to thirty-two—directing the committee to examine into the condition and progress of the building, and the manner in which the materials had been procured. The resolution was further amended in the Senate, and, finally, a substitute resolution was adopted by both houses. On March 21st the committee submitted a lengthy report.

Agitation of Removal Question, 1868.—On January 23, 1868, Francis Giltner introduced a bill in the Assembly to provide for the removal of the seat of government to San José after the adjournment of the Legislature. The city was to furnish, free of charge, for six years, an appropriate capitol, by which time it was expected that the building to be erected by the State would be completed. The bill came up on March 3d as a special order, together with other removal bills, and the whole matter was laid on the table by a vote of thirty-four to nineteen. Afterwards the bills were taken from the table, and on the 21st were indefinitely postponed by a vote of forty-four to twenty.

On January 30, 1868, E. C. Tully introduced a bill in the Assembly, the preamble of which recited that "the completion of the capitol in Sacramento, the grading of the grounds and streets, the ornamenting and fencing of the same, will cost the State several hundred thousand dollars; and the location of the capital is a question of continued agitation by the Legislature; and serious doubts exist in the minds of a large portion of the people throughout the State as to the safety of Sacramento from floods; and that the people of the State are heavily burdened with taxation." The bill provided that whenever the local authorities of San Francisco, San José, Oakland, or Benicia should notify the Governor that they would erect a capitol to cost not less than $400,000, on a suitable lot within the corporate limits of the city they represented, and that they would deed the lot and building to the State before December 1, 1869, then all further work on the Sacramento building should cease. Upon the receipt of the deed and the possession of the building being given, the Governor should issue a proclamation declaring the city so deeding the property to be the seat of government, and, as soon thereafter as practicable, the State officers should remove to the city designated, with the official archives and public property.

On February 21, 1868, W. Z. Angney introduced a bill in the Assembly, the preamble of which was similar to that of Tully's bill, except that it stated in addition that serious doubts existed as to whether San José was not the constitutional seat of government. The bill provided for the appointment of a Board of Capitol Commissioners, to be composed of certain State officers, who were to meet at San José and select a site for the State capitol in that city. They were to adopt plans for the building, and the local authorities were to erect a building before October 1, 1869, in accordance with the plans, and transfer the building and grounds to the State free of charge, when the seat of government was to be removed to that city. Both of these bills were lost with the Giltner bill.

On February 4, 1868, a communication was presented to the Assembly from the Dashaway Club of Santa Cruz, offering the use of their hall for ten years as a State capitol, provided the seat of government should be removed to that place. A similar communication was received by the Senate, but no action was taken on the matter by either house. On the 7th, the authorities of San José and Santa Clara County formally tendered the members of the Legislature and their friends a free special train on which to visit San José. The Council of that city, by resolution, offered to donate to the State any one of their public parks as a site for the capitol, and the Board of Supervisors of Santa Clara County tendered the free use of the court-house for five years, until a capitol could be built on the square. The invitation to ride was accepted by the Senate, but declined by the House. The Senate also took a trip to Oakland, by invitation of the officers of that city. A bill was introduced in each house to repeal the Act providing for the special tax for the construction of the capitol, but they failed of passage.

Occupation of the New Capitol Building, 1869.—On the evening of November 25, 1869, the gas in the legislative chambers, and in the new capitol generally, was lighted for the first time. The offices of the Governor and the Secretary of State in the new building were opened for the transaction of business the next morning. The Supreme Court met there for the first time December 3d. The formal taking possession of the building by the Legislature on December 6th was commemorated by the firing of a salute and a general display of flags in Sacramento. On the 15th a grand ball was given in the capitol in honor of its occupation. In his annual message of December 8, 1869, Governor Haight estimated that it would require $381,280 to complete the building in accordance with the plans, which, added to the expenditures which had been made, would make the total cost of the building $1,447,377.04. On March 29, 1870, an Act was approved declaring the Board of Capitol Commissioners, created by the Act of March 29, 1860, to be constituted of the Governor, Secretary of State, and Treasurer. Another Act was approved on April 4, 1870, authorizing the issuance of seven per cent fifteen-year bonds, to the amount of $250,000, for the purpose of providing for the payment of work to be done and materials to be furnished on the capitol building and grounds after June 1, 1870, and the Commissioners were authorized to expend from the money realized from the sale of bonds not exceeding $50,000 for the purchase of suitable grounds and the erection of a mansion for the Governor. When the bonds matured on July 1, 1885, the State Treasurer reported that all but $14,000 of them belonged to the State School Fund, and consequently very little money left the Treasury vault on that account. Under this Act the Commissioners, on August 19, 1870, decided to purchase a block of land in Sacramento, to the east of the capitol grounds, as a site for the mansion, at an expense of $14,000. In that month work was commenced on the mansion, and it was prosecuted until the appropriation became exhausted. The building remained in an incomplete condition for several years, when finally an Act was passed to fit it up for the State printing office, and it has since been used for that purpose. On March 28, 1872, an Act was approved authorizing the issuance of State bonds to the amount of $250,000, the proceeds from the sale of which were to be applied in paying for the construction of the capitol after June 1, 1872.

Addition to Capitol Grounds, 1872.—On April 1, 1872, a law was passed authorizing the Capitol Commissioners to condemn five blocks of land in Sacramento City between L and N, Twelfth and Fifteenth streets, and to cause the same to be inclosed with the capitol grounds and the block on which the Governor's mansion was being built. The Commissioners were authorized to have the land suitably graded and planted to ornamental trees and shrubbery. The sum of $100,000 was appropriated for the purchase of the land. Under this Act the Sixth District Court appointed E. Black Ryan, Edward Cadwalader, and W. C. Felch, on October 19th, to ascertain the compensation that should be paid to the owners of the property. On February 6, 1873, they reported and assessed the value of the land and improvements at $142,423.40. The State officers declined to make the purchase, as the appraisement was in excess of the appropriation. Finally a few citizens of Sacramento assumed to pay to the property owners the excess over $100,000 and the amount for which the improvements would sell, and the purchase was made by the State. On March 7, 1874, the Legislature passed an Act authorizing the authorities of Sacramento City to submit to a vote of the people of that city the question of levying a special tax of 20 cents on the $100 for the purpose of raising $29,883.70 to reimburse the parties who advanced the money over and above the State appropriation. At a special election held March 10, 1874, the people of Sacramento, by a vote of two thousand two hundred and ninety-three to five hundred and seventy-three, decided to levy the tax upon themselves. Subsequently the Legislature has made appropriations for the building of a first-class stone and iron fence and for the laying of a concrete sidewalk around the grounds.

The entire amount expended by the State for grounds, and for the construction of the present capitol, as shown by the reports of the Controller, is $2,590,460.19.

The present Constitution provides, in section one of article twenty: "The City of Sacramento is hereby declared to be the seat of government of this State, and shall so remain until changed by law; but no law changing the seat of government shall be valid or binding unless the same be approved and ratified by a majority of the qualified electors of the State voting therefor at a general State election, under such regulations and provisions as the Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of each house, may provide, submitting the question of change to the people."

Proposed Removal to San Jose, 1893-1903.—March 11, 1893, E. C. Seymour introduced Senate Constitutional Amendment No. 23, to submit to the people a proposed amendment to the effect that San José "is hereby declared to be the seat of government," on condition "that the State shall receive a donation of a site of not less than ten acres and one million dollars before such removal shall be had" from Sacramento. The Governor, Secretary of State, and Attorney-General were to be authorized to approve the site, and upon their approval and the payment of the money into the State Treasury, the Legislature was to provide for the erection of the necessary capitol building and the removal of the seat of government. The amendment was adopted in the Senate on the 11th by a vote of twenty-seven to eight, and in the Assembly by a vote of fifty-seven to seven. On the 13th a motion to reconsider was laid on the table in the Assembly. The Supreme Court in the case of H. P. Livermore vs. E. G. Waite, Secretary of State (102 Cal. 113), on March 29, 1894, in an action to prevent the Secretary of State from certifying the amendment to the various County Clerks or from doing any act submitting it to the people, decided that it was invalid.

On January 28, 1903, Louis Oneal introduced Senate Constitutional Amendment No. 16, which provided that after the first Monday in January, 1907, Sacramento should cease to be the seat of government and that San José should become and be the seat of government, to so remain until changed by law. February 17th the proposition was reported by the committee without recommendation, and on March 2d it was refused adoption in the Senate, by a vote of thirteen ayes to twenty-five noes. Eli Wright introduced a similar amendment in the Assembly (Constitutional Amendment No. 28) on February 14th. On the 24th it was reported without recommendation by a majority of the committee, and on March 6th it was withdrawn by the author.

Proposed Removal to Berkeley.—On February 21, 1907, G. R. Lukens introduced a bill in the Senate providing for the removal of the seat of government from Sacramento to Berkeley. February 27th, it was reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with a recommendation that it do pass. On February 28th, the bill passed the Senate by a vote of thirty ayes to nine noes. On March 2d, the bill passed the Assembly by a vote of fifty-nine ayes to eighteen noes. The bill was approved by the Governor on the 6th day of March.

Following is a copy of the bill as passed and approved and which is to be voted upon by the qualified electors of the State at the general election to be held in November, 1908:

"An Act to change the seat of government of the State of California from the city of Sacramento to the town of Berkeley, and to submit the question of such change to the people, and to provide regulations and provisions for such submission.

"The people of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

"SECTION 1. On and after the first day of January, A. D. nineteen hundred and nine, the seat of government of the State of California shall be changed from the city of Sacramento to the town of Berkeley, and it is hereby declared that on and after said date the town of Berkeley shall be the seat of government of this State.

"SEC. 2. The question of such change of the seat of government shall be submitted to the people of the State at a general State election to be held in the month of November in the year nineteen hundred and eight, and in the manner and subject to the regulations and provisions provided in title two, of part three, of the Political Code of the State of California, for submitting any proposition or constitutional amendment to the vote of the people, and said question shall be designated on the ballot in the following words: 'An Act to change the seat of government of the State of California from the city of Sacramento to the town of Berkeley.'"

HISTORY OF THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

At the time when the question of designing the great seal for the new State was being agitated in the Constitutional Convention which met in Monterey in 1849, there happened to be sojourning temporarily in that little town an accomplished and cultivated officer of the United States Army, Major Robert Selden Garnett. He was a gentleman of modest demeanor, and excelled in the use of his pencil. One evening he sketched a design for a seal of the State, and it was exhibited to various members of the convention. One of the delegates asked leave to present it to the body, but the quiet Major declined, upon the ground that he believed that a knowledge of the source from whence it had come would prevent its adoption. There existed at that time quite a hostility between the military authorities and the nascent civil powers, and there was an especial distrust of the secret mission of Thomas Butler King, with which Garnett was understood to be connected. Caleb Lyon, one of the clerks of the convention, learned of the design, and readily obtained the consent of Garnett to appropriate it and present it as his own production. As the design came from the hands of its author, it was chaste and beautiful, and somewhat different from the present seal. It represented the figure of Minerva, with the Golden Gate, and a ship in full sail in the foreground, and the Sierra Nevada range in the background, with the word "Eureka" above. The design was referred to a committee, and on September 29, 1849, the report of the committee was considered by the convention. W. E. Shannon deemed the design a most happy one, but more appropriate for a coat of arms than for a seal. He said that it was unusual for a State seal to contain a motto, and that it ordinarily comprehended the main emblems, and the words "Great seal of the State." An explanation accompanying the design was entered in the Journal, as follows:

"Around the bend of the ring are represented thirty-one stars, being the number of States of which the Union will consist upon the admission of California. The foreground figure represents the Goddess Minerva, having sprung full grown from the brain of Jupiter. She is introduced as a type of the political birth of the State of California, without having gone through the probation of a territory. At her feet crouches a grizzly bear feeding upon the clusters from a grapevine, emblematic of the peculiar characteristics of the country. A miner is engaged with his rocker and bowl at his side, illustrating the golden wealth of the Sacramento, upon whose waters are seen shipping, typical of commercial greatness; and the snow-clad peaks of the Sierra Nevada make up the background, while above is the Greek motto 'Eureka' (I have found it), applying either to the principle involved in the admission of the State, or the success of the miner at work."

After various amendments had been suggested, the matter was laid on the table. On October 2d the report of the committee was again considered. Rodman M. Price submitted a resolution that the design for the seal reported by the committee be accepted. O. M. Wozencraft submitted the following, which was rejected: "That the seal be amended by striking out the figures of the gold-digger and the bear and introducing instead bags of gold and bales of merchandise." M. G. Vallejo submitted an amendment that the bear be taken out of the design; or, if it do remain, that it be represented as made fast by a lasso in the hands of a vaquero.

After the debate, the amendment proposed by Vallejo was rejected by a vote of sixteen to twenty-one. Price's resolution was then adopted. W. S. Sherwood moved that the seal be the "coat of arms" of the State of California, and the motion was then carried by a vote of twenty-one to sixteen. Price then submitted a resolution that Lyon be authorized to superintend the engraving of the seal; that he furnish the same, in the shortest possible time, to the Secretary of the Convention, with a press and all necessary appendages, and that the sum of $1,000 be advanced to him in full compensation for the design and seal. This resolution was not considered until the 11th, when a substitute was adopted, authorizing Lyon to superintend the engraving and to furnish the seal as soon as possible to the Secretary of the Convention, to be delivered to the Secretary of State under the Constitution; and the sum of $1,000 was to be paid, in full compensation for the design, seal, press, and all appendages. It was also resolved that the words "The Great Seal of the State of California" be added to the design. Henry W. Halleck inquired if any gentleman present knew what had become of the original design, and that the gentleman by whom it was designed (Major Garnett) requested that it should be found if possible and handed to the gentleman who occupied the chair. Mr. Sherwood said that he believed the seal was not the entire production of the gentleman who had been authorized to have it engraved, and that Lyon did not claim it as such. He said that the original design had been given to Lyon by a gentleman who did not wish his name to be made public, but expressed a desire, in a confidential letter to Lyon, that he (Lyon) might be known as the author.

The bear was added chiefly to gratify Major J. R. Snyder and the men of the Bear Flag revolution. Then was added the figure of a man with an uplifted pick-ax, as an emblem of the great mining interests of the country.

It seems that Lyon either did not get the $1,000 voted him by the convention, or that he wanted to be paid again. The following article was published in the "Alta California" of February 19, 1850, and presumably written by Edward Gilbert, the editor, a member of the Constitutional Convention, and one of our first Congressmen:

"We observe that a petition has been made to the Legislature, on behalf of Caleb Lyon, for $1,000 for the State seal, 'designed and executed by him.' It may as well be understood at once that if any credit belongs to any person for the design of the seal, it is not to Caleb Lyon, of Lyonsville. The original design for the seal was made by an officer of the army, sojourning temporarily at Monterey during the time the convention was in session. When the subject of a seal was mooted, this design was shown to various members of the convention, who suggested some emendations and the insertion of other matters. These were drawn in by the original designer, who did not wish it to be known who was the author, and the seal was presented by Mr. Lyon. After a pretty hard fight it was adopted, and $1,000 appropriated to Mr. Lyon to procure a die and proper press. This duty he performed after a fashion. The design was marred in the engraving; the die was not sunk near deep enough, and the press was not sufficiently powerful for the purpose. The commissions of the congressional delegation were without the slightest impress of the seal before they left the country. If we are not very much mistaken, Mr. Lyon, of Lyonsdale, received his money out of the Civil Fund, and is now conveying it to the sylvan retreats of Lyonsdale. But this has nothing to do with the paternity of the seal. All we wish to state, and that most distinctly, is that Mr. Lyon has no right or title to the honor of either designing or executing the seal any more than the Khan of Tartary."

In October, 1855, a peculiar complication occurred between Governor Bigler and the Secretary of State, James W. Denver. Under the Constitution, as it then stood, the Secretary of State was the appointee of the Governor. Denver had been appointed by Bigler on February 19, 1853. Afterwards a difference arose between the Governor and Secretary of State. Denver had been elected to Congress in 1854, and on October 5, 1855, Bigler addressed a letter to Denver demanding the great seal of State, and said that he desired to keep it in his own office, where he claimed the Constitution contemplated that it should be kept. On the same day Denver replied, declining to permit the seal to pass out of his possession, and immediately departed for Washington to attend to his congressional duties, leaving his deputy in charge of the Secretary's office. He also left a resignation to take effect November 5th. On the 6th of October the Governor again visited the office of the Secretary, demanded the seal of the deputy, and was again refused its possession. He then handed to the deputy the commission of Charles H. Hempstead as Secretary of State, and directed the deputy to affix to it the seal, but the deputy refused to do so, on the ground that it was a constitutional office, and could not be vacated except by death, resignation, or impeachment. The deputy of Denver held possession of the office for a month, during which time his acts were not recognized as valid by the Governor, and it is said that the latter caused a duplicate great seal to be made, with which his official acts were attested by his newly appointed Secretary. Years afterwards it was stated that forged patents for State lands were in circulation, and that one of these old seals had been stolen and used for attesting them. However this may be, there are two dies of the State seal in the possession of the Secretary of State at this time.

In 1858 the State seal was damaged so that it failed to give a true impression, and a bill was introduced in the Senate by Mr. Thom to authorize the Secretary of State to procure a new seal, to be engraved on steel, and to be substituted for and used instead of the seal then in existence; and requiring him to destroy the then State seal in the presence of the Governor and Controller. The bill was accompanied with a design which reduced the size of the seal a twelfth part of an inch, and to admit of this contraction some of the details of the original design were omitted. The bear was made to crouch submissively at the feet of Minerva, the miner's cradle was left out, and the miner was brought nearer the water. On March 10, 1858, the Senate amended the bill by providing that the design and size should be the same as in the then seal; and on April 16th another amendment was adopted that "the design of the present seal shall be preserved intact in the new one, but the size thereof shall be reduced six tenths of an inch, so that the new seal when completed shall be three and three tenths of an inch in diameter." The bill with this amendment passed the Senate on the 31st, but it was not considered in the House.

Garnett, the designer of the original seal, was born in Virginia about 1821; entered West Point in 1837; graduated twenty-seventh in his class July 1, 1841, and appointed Brevet Second Lieutenant of artillery; was assistant instructor of infantry tactics at the military academy from July, 1843, to October, 1844; was Aid-de-Camp to General Wool in 1845, and distinguished himself in the battles of Palo Alto and Reseca de la Palma; was promoted to first lieutenant August 18, 1846; was Aid-de-Camp to General Taylor during the Mexican War and until 1849; brevetted Captain and Major for gallant and meritorious conduct at Monterey and Buena Vista; transferred to the infantry in 1848; promoted to a captaincy in 1851; from 1852 to 1854 was commandant of the corps of cadets and instructor of infantry tactics at West Point; appointed Captain of the First Regiment Cavalry in 1855, and Major of the Ninth Infantry in the same month; was commander in the operations against the Indians on Puget Sound in 1856, and commanded the Yakima expedition in 1858. At the breaking out of the Rebellion he took the side of the Confederates, was promoted to a brigadier-generalship and assigned to the Department of West Virginia. Here General McClellan attacked him, and after several days of alternate fighting and retreating, at the battle of Carrick's Ford, on July 15, 1861, Garnett was killed and his forces routed. His body was carefully cared for by the Federal commander, and after being embalmed was forwarded to his friends.

Caleb Lyon was appointed Consul to Shanghai, China, by President Polk in 1845. On his return to New York he served in both branches of the Legislature, and in 1853 was elected from that State to Congress. In 1864 he was appointed Governor of Idaho Territory, and retained the office three years. He died at Rossville, New York, on September 9, 1875. Of the members of the convention whose names figure in this article, W. E. Shannon died of cholera at Sacramento on November 3, 1850, at the age of twenty-eight, Rodman M. Price was afterwards elected Governor of New Jersey. General Vallejo died at Sonoma, January 18, 1890. Winfield S. Sherwood was afterwards a District Judge, and died in Sierra County on June 25, 1870. Snyder held many important public positions, removed to Sonoma County, conducted an extensive vineyard, and died there April 29, 1878. Halleck was at that time the Secretary of State under the military government. He afterwards practiced law in San Francisco, and in July, 1862, was appointed General-in-Chief of all the armies of the United States. He held that position until March 12, 1864, when General Grant was made Lieutenant-General. He died in Louisville, Kentucky, January 9, 1872.

Albrecht Kuner, a native of Lindau, Bavaria, a member of the California Pioneers, was the engraver of the original seal as designed by Caleb Lyon. Mr. Kuner died in February, 1906.

YOSEMITE VALLEY AND MARIPOSA BIG TREE GROVE.

YOSEMITE VALLEY.

Yosemite Valley, preëminently the wonder of this continent, was granted to the State of California by the United States by an Act of Congress approved June 30, 1864, which grant also included the "Mariposa Big Tree Grove."

The surveys necessary to establish "the locus, extent, and limits" of the valley and the Mariposa Big Tree Grove were made in the autumn of 1864. These surveys were forwarded by the Surveyor-General of California to Washington, and subsequently accepted by the Commissioner of the General Land Office; but before such grant could become the property of the State of California, it was necessary that it should be accepted by the State Legislature, which was done by an Act approved April 2, 1866. By this Act the property was to be under the control and management of the Governor, and eight other persons appointed by him on the 28th day of September, 1864, constituting "The Commissioners to Manage the Yosemite Valley and the Mariposa Big Tree Grove," whose terms of office should be four years.

Pursuant to an Act of the Legislature of the State of California, approved March 3, 1905, the premises were receded and regranted to the United States, and accepted by the United States by House Resolution No. 118, adopted June 6, 1906, since which time they have been under the management and control of the War Department of the United States.

The Yosemite Valley is a natural gorge situated in the extreme eastern portion of Mariposa County, in the heart of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, at an elevation of about 4,000 feet, and distant from San Francisco, in an air line due east, about 155 miles. At this point the Sierra range is about 70 miles wide, and the valley lies midway between the east and west bases. The level area, or floor, of the valley, containing 1,141 acres, of which 745 acres are meadow land, is about 7 miles in length, and from half a mile to a mile in width, sunk to a perpendicular depth of nearly a mile below the general level of the adjacent country, through the center of which flows the Merced River.

The territory embraced by the Yosemite grant comprises the whole of the valley proper, and extends back from the edge of the precipice for an average distance of about one mile, covering in all an area of 36,111.14 acres, only a small portion of which can ever be made useful for any other purpose than that for which the Act of Congress granting it to the State, devoted it, namely: a place for "public use and recreation." All of the land extending back from the edge of the bluffs forming the boundaries of the valley is high, much of it exceeding 8,000 feet, and either covered thickly with heavy timber or extremely rocky.

"To the Mariposa Battalion, commanded by Major Savage, must be given the honor of first entering the Yosemite Valley," says Dr. Bunnell, in his "Discovery of the Yosemite." He gives the date as March 21, 1851.

The first tourist party to visit the valley was organized by the late J. M. Hutchings and reached there the latter part of June, 1855. Upon his return to Mariposa, Mr.

Hutchings wrote and published in the "Gazette" the first authentic description of the "Valley of the Grizzly Bear" (Yosemite).

"O words, how poor, and vain, and weak,
When of the masterpiece we speak,
Of emerald vale and starry peak—
Thy glorious, grand Yosemite."

—W. A. Croffut.

The Yosemite National Park is a vast mountain region surrounding the valley, and forming adjacent watersheds. It was first set apart by Congress in 1890 as a place for public resort and recreation. As originally constituted, it comprised some 42 townships, or about 1,500 square miles, but its area has been considerably reduced by succeeding Acts of Congress, the territory taken therefrom being turned over into the national forest reserves. As now outlined it is a very irregular, pear-shaped area, covering approximately some 32 townships, or about 1,150 square miles, lying partly in Mariposa, Tuolumne, Madera, and Mono counties, including the Yosemite Valley Grant and the Mariposa Big Tree Grove, which latter is now also within the Yosemite National Park boundaries, as appears by the official map of the U. S. Geological Survey, filed at Washington, D. C., May 22, 1907. This entire territory is now under the control of the United States Government, upon which is imposed the cost of maintaining it as a National Park. All land lying lower than an elevation of 5,000 feet above sea-level has been excluded from the Park limits, with the exception of the Yosemite Valley itself. From there it rises to the tops of the Sierra Nevadas, the crest or summit of the range forming the northeastern boundary line of the Park.

MARIPOSA BIG TREE GROVE.

This group of Sequoia gigantea was included in the tract of land that was granted to the State of California in 1864 and receded to the United States in 1905. The grant contains 2,586.26 acres, the name of the grove being due to its location in the County of Mariposa.

These trees were named "Wah-wo-nah" (Indian for Big Trees) by the learned botanist Endlicher in honor of "Sequoia," or "Sequoyah," the Indian name of "George Guess," the Cadmus of the Cherokees, who invented the alphabet which made the written language of the Cherokee Nation and gave it a literature. He was born about 1770 and died in 1843.

This grove, no less a wonder than the Yosemite, was discovered by Galen Clark, for years guardian of the Yosemite Valley, in April, 1857, although as early as 1849 the group known as the "Fresno Grove," now situated in Madera County, was discovered by Major Burney, then sheriff of Mariposa County.

The Sequoias of this group are divided into two groves, the upper and the lower, the two groves numbering about 621 individual trees, varying in size from 30 to 120 feet in circumference and from 100 to 325 feet in height, the average height being 250 feet and the average circumference being 40 feet. The altitude at the Big Trees varies from 5,750 to 7,140 feet.

There are ten groups of the Sequoia gigantea in California, namely: Calaveras, South Grove, Tuolumne, Merced, Mariposa, Fresno, Dinkey Creek, Kings River, New Kings River, and Kaweah or Tule; all being located at an elevation ranging from 5,000 to 8,000 feet.
